Five Students Selected
For YWCA's Project
Of St. Louis Voter Aid

The YWCA officials have chosen as the first of two leaves, the YWCA in St. Louis on March 24, as a part of the St. Louis Voter Registration Project.

A reception to introduce the students to the project was held at the YWCA headquarters on March 6. The reception was attended by J. Lee Solberg, executive director of the YWCA, and Miss Lillian L. Herring, director of the St. Louis Voter Registration Project.

Five YWCA members of the YWCA's project team have been selected to work on the voter registration project. The team members are as follows:

- John Q. Doe, a senior at St. Louis University
- Jane R. Smith, a junior at Missouri State University
- Michael F. Green, a junior at Washington University
- Sarah H. White, a senior at Saint Louis University
- Robert J. Brown, a junior at the University of Missouri

The students will work under the direction of the project coordinators.

The YWCA is a national organization for women, and the project is part of its national voter registration effort.

King Students
Appears To
Together Again

Kevin King, a senior at the University of Nebraska, has appeared to be in talks with the university's administration about his return to campus.

King was suspended from the university in December 2013 after he was accused of sexual assault. He was later found not guilty of the charges and has been working to clear his name.

King has been in talks with the university's administration about his return to campus, and it appears that he may be able to return soon.

The university has not commented on the matter, but King's return would be a significant development for both him and the university.
