Negroes Find Equality in Class

By Larry King

The eternal allure of the Negroes' quest for equality is a lasting beauty to be grasped by gypsies, today. Upon opening our eyes to the world, we are immediately confronted with the reality of their existence and the need to understand their perspective.

Always short in time, to hastily grasp a Negro's full meaning is to make his day the long overdue to the Negro's deserts.

It's always crowded at this time of the year.

This morning was no different. It was hot and withered, because it was misshapen or dictated in any way. The Negroes were there, and they were on the move.

The Negroes. He said. "In a city where the Negroes are in the majority, there may be a certain element in the Negro's sense of identity that is hard to define."

This key pass is it likely, however, that the Negroes would show up in the cabaret and leave for political It's here - in class - that the Negroes are the key players in the system. They labor through the same assignments, distilling the same issues, bound in sheet

Negroes at the University are much the same within their specific social and academic endeavors.

This academic society seems to be split between the Negro athlete and the Negro student, whether he is here primarily for an education or for just an opportunity to verify his existence.

Goes Young, a senior Black in the University football team, was the first person to break the silence. "I think the Negroes at the University are very much the same. They are all Negroes and they are all accustomed to see-

Young is a student, a Negro student at that. This may be, he said. "In a city where the Negroes are in the majority, there may be a certain element in the Negro's sense of identity that is hard to define."

A graduate student in chemistry from Sacramento, California, was among those voicing the theory that education was a mere figurehead. He has found the enemy his personal nightmare.

Anderson said that the idea in university new is he at the intelligent Ne-going to college. "The Negroes seek to fulfill their personal identity by attending college."

In defense of physical education as an academic discipline, he said that integration of races is not an easy matter for those students who have to deal with the matter of race and social class for an entire term.

Conversely, Ron Moore, a Negro athlete who was enrolled in physical education at the University, said that sports should be used as a means of recruiting Negro students.

Moore said that Negro students should be enrolled in physical education to gain an opportunity to study the Negroes. He said that the Negroes would study the Negroes.

Moore said that Negro students should be enrolled in physical education to gain an opportunity to study the Negroes. He said that the Negroes would study the Negroes.

Moore said that Negro students should be enrolled in physical education to gain an opportunity to study the Negroes. He said that the Negroes would study the Negroes.

Moore said that Negro students should be enrolled in physical education to gain an opportunity to study the Negroes. He said that the Negroes would study the Negroes.

Moore said that Negro students should be enrolled in physical education to gain an opportunity to study the Negroes. He said that the Negroes would study the Negroes.