

Teachers College Revises Requirements For Major

The Teachers College faculty has revised course requirements to further strengthen undergraduate preparation in specific subject matter fields based on revised teacher certification rules.

Dean Walter Beggs said that the revision eliminates the minor subject matter field and strengthens preparation in a major subject matter field. It does not alter existing requirements in Teachers College educational courses. The 125 hours needed for graduation remains the same.

was required to complete a major and a minor. The mathematics requirement, for example, was increased from 27 hours to 48 hours under the new program; physics was increased from 27 to 52 hours; English was increased from 33 to 45 hours; and history was increased from 32 to 47.

Professor Saylor explained that there are three aspects to the preparation of a teacher. They include: general education courses, 40 hours; teacher education courses, 20 hours; and subject matter courses, ranging from 45 to 59 hours under the new program. The balance of the 125 hours required for graduation may be obtained with electives.

tion in the democratic process on the part of the student. Nothing is taken away from the education of the student by lowering the requirement of this participation in student government from a 5.0 to a 4.0.

Stuckey's proposal passed by a vote of 8 to 6.

Miss Guenzel stated after the meeting to the Daily Nebraskan "Education is the primary reason a student is here. If a student has an average lower than the all-University average, five, then he should not be allowed to participate in extra-curricular activities."

Stuckey stated, to the Daily Nebraskan, by way of rebuttal, that Miss Guenzel's arguments were "typically illogical feminine argument, and 'aristocratic sour grapes since the proposal has already passed.'"

Another discussion centered around the powers of the Association. Certain conditions must be met by student organizations in order for them to continue in existence.

The Association has the right "to revoke, by conviction in Student Jury Court, the constitutions and rights to function of organizations failing to comply," according to the draft of the new constitution.

Gale Muller wanted to know how such organizations could be made to comply and how they could be controlled.

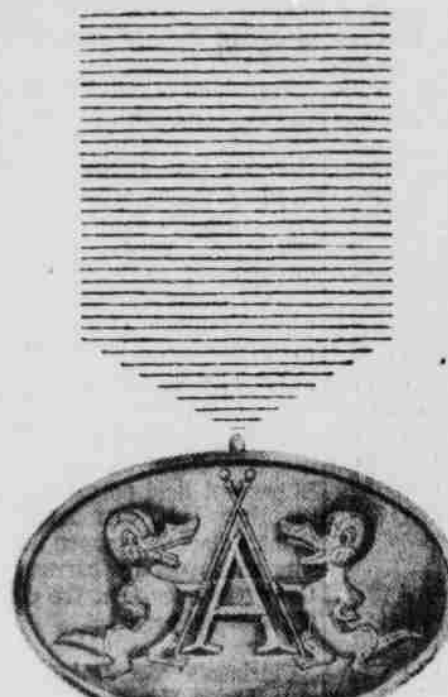

John Lydick said the Association could freeze their finances. He pointed out that it was only in the area of the format of the organization that the Association has control.
