Area Agents Experiment In Nebraska

Nebraska is among 12 states in which the Federal Extension Service is evaluating the use of multi-county area Extension agents.

Such area agents are "hybrids" in the sense that they have the academic credentials of a specialist but live with and recognize the problems of people in a limited geographical area.

A type of area specialist plan initiated in 1963 is being refined in a five-county area in northeast Nebraska. It involves the county-area combination approach.

Specifically, county extension services in Dakota, Cedar, Wayne, Dixon and Thurston counties are combined in an area Extension office at the Northeast Nebraska Experiment Station at Concord. One county agent remains in each of the five counties.

Area county agents specializing in specific subject matter fields in agriculture and home economics serve the primary five-county area. The northeast area Extension staff is under the supervision of Dr. Denzil Clegg, who also is superintendent of the Northeast Station.

It is estimated that the study teams will complete their surveys in about six weeks. Results of the study will be summarized for reporting to State Extension Directors at their annual meeting in May.

Convention

amendment read: "No senate member is eligible for executive or judicial position, except as hereinafter noted."

The submitted draft of the constitution made no provision to absolutely guarantee organizations a position on the Cabinet. It stated: "The Student Cabinet shall comprise an advisory body appointed by the President."

Terry Schauf said, "As I understood it, the Cabinet was a body made up of representatives from various organizations. This was agreed upon by the convention earlier and should have been included."

Corrections were made and the draft now includes in the Cabinet a "Secretary of Organizations for Honoraries and Professional Societies, another for Regulatory Organizations, and one for Activities, i.e., to include all other organizations."

Verba pointed out "We have 140 organizations on this campus, and three secretaries to represent them."

According to the draft these secretaries "shall be responsible to the President for the execution of any legislation passed by the Senate pertaining to organizations, for the maintenance of good relations between organizations, and to serve as a liaison between organizations and the Association Organs."

Kittams then proposed an amendment to remove the organizations from the Cabinet, guaranteed by the draft of the constitution. "Whether or not these organizations will have representatives on the Cabinet should be up to the President," asserted Kittams.

"The whole idea of the Cabinet is to give the president an advisory body, to use as he sees fit," he said.

Schauf answered, "I disagree. Organizations should be represented. At the present time organizations hold specific seats in the Student Council. The purpose of the Cabinet is to guarantee these organizations will continue to have some representation."

Denny Swanstrom pointed out if Kittam's amendment passed there would be nothing to prevent the President from not including organizational representation in his Cabinet.

"But I think that these three secretaries would give him a good base to start from."

Cuz Guenzel said, "I agree there should be some coordination between the Association and the organizations, but it should not be done through these three secretaries."

Schauf pointed out why he thought the organizations should be included in the Cabinet. "In the present draft they are apart from the Association itself. They are in the Cabinet which is just a part of the Executive Branch and furthermore they are just a part of the Cabinet. But they still should be included. First, the President should be aware of their political power; they are a physical part of this University. Second, they do a lot for this campus. And thirdly, they bring a lot to this campus."

Kittams rejoined, "Yes, they do play an important part. But let's look at their separation from student government as a growing up, and not as a tearing down. Organizations are lessening in importance as the University gets bigger, especially so with direct representation. There is not any way to guarantee them representation. I don't think they should be on the president's cabinet."

"They still can play an important part in the politics of this campus, though. They can establish lobbies. They can get behind and support their own candidate for the senate. And there are many other areas where they can exert pressure."

"Representation of organizations has no precedence except in the old Student Council."

Schauf pointed out "The senate has direct control over the organizations, yet the organizations have no representation."

The amendment was defeated by a vote of 7 to 6.

Kittams said, in a statement given to the Daily Nebraskan after the meeting. "It is unfortunate that the formers have not outgrown their penchant for creating offices and formulating trivia."

An extra meeting was set for Saturday at one o'clock.

University To Host All-Staters

Applications are being received for the 1965 All-State High School Course June 13-July 1 at the University, according to John Moran, director of All-State.

The week course is open to all high school students from the 10th through the 12th grades including those who graduate this year.

More than 9,000 Nebraska high school students have attended All-State within the past 30 years.

All-State consists of a series of courses in art, journalism, speech and music taught by University of Nebraska professors. Its purpose is to provide an ideal environment for young people and a talent laboratory in which young musicians, debaters, actors, artists and journalists, can try their skills under expert supervision.

All-Staters will have access to the New Sheldon Memorial Art Gallery, will live on the University campus and participate in a number of group activities including orchestra concerts, musicals, debate tournaments, the publishing of newspapers, and art shows.

Application forms may be obtained by writing John Moran, director, All-State High School Course, University of Nebraska, Lincoln.

Increased Draft Call Continues

The Defense Department will probably recommend to President Johnson that the draft must be continued if the nation is to maintain adequate armed forces, according to a United Press International story.

"Once-high hopes of ending the draft appear to be fading fast," the story reads, but precise proposals that will result from a year-long study are largely speculative.

Recent draft calls have had to be increased to make up a deficit caused by a drop in military enlistments since talk of ending conscription reached a peak in the presidential campaign.

Estimated needs are for land, sea and air forces totaling between 2.6 million and 2.7 million men.

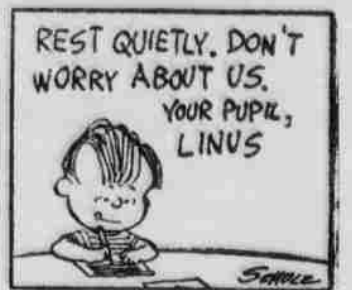

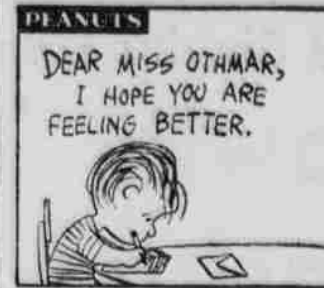

Because of the enlistment decline, the Army has had to double its March draft call. It is requesting 7,990 men for March and 13,700 men for April. The increase is expected to continue into May and June.

CCA Assistance Given Ag Grads

University graduate students Roscoe Dickson and Bob Olsen have been awarded research assistantships by Consumers Cooperative Association headquartered in Kansas City, Mo.

Olsen received his bachelor of science degree in vocational education in agriculture from the University in Feb., 1964, and is now doing graduate work in soil fertility at the University.

Dickson received his bachelor of science degree in agriculture with an agricultural chemistry specialization from the University of Missouri in June, 1964. He has previously worked as a chemist in the Missouri Farmers Association's fertilizer laboratory and the chemical laboratories of the experiment station in Columbia.

Club Council Ups Donation To 4-H Camp

The Nebraska Council of Home Extension Clubs has voted an additional contribution of $1,000 toward the construction and development of facilities of the Nebraska State 4-H Camp in the Nebraska National Forest near Halsey.

This contribution brings the total funds contributed through the Council to $4,651.55, according to W. M. Antes, State 4-H Club Leader. Local Home Extension clubs and county Home Extension Councils have raised the total to $7,382.96.

The State 4-H program emphasizes the development of skills and understanding in such areas as citizenship, safety, conservation, health, handicraft and recreation. The state camp provides experiences in personal development in a convenient, beautiful and inspiring setting, Antes said.
