Speece Chosen Top Woman In Journalism

Peggy Speece was named the outstanding woman news major of the University School of Journalism Saturday noon.

She was honored with a $25 check and certificate by the Nebraska News Women, a statewide organization of professional women journalists, at their annual convention in Lincoln.

During the past summer Miss Speece became something of a celebrity when one of the national wire services served their client papers with a feature article on her intense interest in sports. She was serving as a sports reporter for the Albuquerque (N.M.) Tribune as a part of her University intern requirement.

Miss Speece has become the first woman journalist to cover sports events in the University press box. She also has covered the Drake Relays, and hopes to make sports-writing a career.

Often asked how she became interested in pursuing sportswriting as a career, Miss Speece explains that her father, Roy, was a former coach, player and referee. "Coaches and players have accepted the fact that I am sincerely interested in sports and seem pleased that I want to make it a career," she said.

She was first interested in landscape architecture, attended Iowa State University, but missed the journalism work done while in high school. "I transferred to Nebraska because I understood that its journalism school was one of the best in the nation."

Miss Speece is a former sports editor of the Daily Nebraskan, is a women's dormitory councillor and member of Theta Sigma Phi, women's honorary journalism society. She received the James E. Lawrence scholarship.

Upon graduation she will join the general news and sports section of the Kansas City Star.

Lincoln Elks Establish Language Scholarship

A Graden Rathbun memorial scholarship has been established by the Lincoln Elks Lodge No. 80 in the field of Romance Languages at the University, accordign to Vincent Collura, exalted ruler and Sen. Marvin Stromer.

The scholarship is to be awarded to a major in the Romance Languages Department as selected by the department chairman and faculty advisors.

"Latin America is and will continue to be the focal point of political intrigue in the Western Hemisphere," commented Sen. Stromer.

"The challenge of communism in this hemisphere thus is a very real one. The Elks through this scholarship feel that this will provide a vehicle for the combatting of this political disease."

Dr. Roberto Esquenazi-Mayo, department chairman and director of the Latin American project at the University, will administer the scholarship.

ing the harm done to low-income groups by raising tuition.

A date has not yet been set to address the legislature, according to John Lydick, Student Council president. Several senators have offered their help in allowing a student delegation to appear before the lawmakers, Daily Nebraskan Editor Frank Patsch said.

Lydick and Barton were enthusiastic about the number of students who had signed the petition. "This is undoubtedly the greatest number of signatures on a petition in the history of the University," Barton said. He expressed hope that off-campus students would make an effort to sign the petitions this week.

"It looks like we'll end up with about 5,000. We couldn't reach the off-campus students without organizing a small army," Barton said.

We wonder if the discipline

Berkley Student 'Sit-Ins' Promote Rental Company

Two University of California, Berkeley, fraternities believe they have found the "real thing" in sit-ins, says the Daily Californian.

Until noon one Saturday, the Sigma Alpha Epsilons and the Alpha Kappa Lambdas were locked in a life and death struggle to see who could sit in a chair the longest.

Two chairs were built to scale and donated by a national renting agency. The rules are rigorous: the sit-in cannot lie down, stand up or lean on his elbows.

After 12 hours, beginning at midnight, the SAE's gave up. But Ben Reese of AKL was heading into his 40th hour and planned to go for 100.

The stunt was a promotion for Abbey Rents, who presumably hope that sit-ins will become the newest college fad.

Two University of Texas football players were placed on "conduct probation" after assault and disturbing the peace in an Austin motel.

A third student involved was also put on probation but had not been arrested.

The Daily Texan said: "Student discipline seems to be a two-faced creature.

Apparently it has a special lenient face for some and a rigid, unbending mask for others.

Last fall two men's service organizations were placed on indefinite disciplinary conduct probation for displaying poor sportsmanship on the athletic field.

A heretofore unheard of penalty, it was explained as meaning that if the groups stepped out of line again they would be barred from appearing on the playing field. The Dean of Students said the penalty was "for groups rather than for individuals."

Thursday, a new penalty was handed down by the Dean of Men's Office. Three students, involved in a city violation, were placed on "conduct probation." It was explained that the probation would not deny privileges or restrict actions, but if those on it had further violations, they would be suspended from the University.

We are not judging the justice of the punishment in either of the above cases.

But we wonder what kind of turn student discipline is taking. We wonder if disciplinary action in one case is applicable to other cases.

In both instances, special groups or individuals, i.e., men's honoraries and football players, were involved when the penalties were applied.

The penalties are apparently new. They are not listed in the General Information catalog section dealing with discipline. They are not nearly as harsh as the well-known disciplinary probation.

We wonder if the discipline

procedure is being as flexibly applied in the average student's case. We question whether the lenient side of student discipline is looking at student Joe Blow."

Enforcement of year-old dress rules in University of Delaware dining halls resulted in a rash of student criticism.

The Delaware Review commented:

Colleges should have no need for dress regulations. Individuals on the college level hopefully have developed enough good taste to know how to dress properly.

At this University, however, students come to meals in sweatshirts and dirty jeans, go to see administrative officials unshaven and without coats and ties. They excuse themselves by saying that each person has a right to dress as he pleases. After all, so the argument goes, "If you can't have freedom at a university, where can you?"

A university represents the acme of human knowledge. The propagation of that knowledge in effect demands a rigid conformity to which few object. But when demands are made of students to conform only slightly to widely accepted social standards, they become rebellious and scream "individuality."

They hide behind the cry of nonconformity and are either too lazy or crude to care about their appearance. In such cases a few students degrade the whole student body and it becomes necessary for a controlling body to step in.

A year ago the Student Government Association did step in and after lengthy study presented a set of regulations which were approved by the Senate.

No response came from the campus—because the regulations were not enforced. This semester an enforcement clause was added. Students who came to meals improperly dressed would receive a warning letter explaining that their meal tickets would be suspended if they refused to follow the rule. Only then did people begin to complain.

The apparent lack of personal dress standards on campus made student government actions necessary. Such minimal requirements are hardly an infringement of individuality.

Harding Elected To Office At State YR Convention

Bette Harding, University senior and political science major, was elected co-chairman of the State Young Republicans Saturday morning.

Miss Harding is the only University student to hold office in the state group.

Other state officers elected Saturday include Lowell Hummel, of Fairbury, re-elected chairman; Barb Drahot, of Creighton University, secretary; Robert Perse, of Beatrice, treasurer; Carol Walker, of Lincoln, re-elected National Committeewoman; and Ron Romans, of Omaha, national committeeman.

Bill Harding, former president of the YR group at the University, was given honorable mention in the outstanding YR contest for the state.

The convention, which began Friday evening and lasted until noon yesterday, was "one of the largest state conventions we've ever had," according to John Reiser, University YR president.

Donald "Buz" Lukens, national YR chairman from Ohio spoke to the convention Saturday noon.

Saturday night Sen. Carl Curtis indicted a American youth for failure to vote.

"It is rather astonishing that of all the groups who do not take the time to even vote, the young people are the worst offenders," Curtis said.

Only 38 per cent of the 21 to 29 age group voted in 1962, the last non-presidential election, he said.

Curtis told the group that "Millions of people around the world would give all they have for the right to vote and have a voice in their government."

Speaking of legislation on major issues, he said the Republicans should offer an alternative program to the administration's, "if a program is needed, if it is properly a federal function and if we can afford it."

But "whenever the Republican Party offers its own version of a program that we can get along without, that we cannot afford, or that is not in accord with the Constitution, then our party will reap and rightly so, the ridicule of many thoughtful Americans."

Republican positions, he said, should be determined by what policy is best in the long run for the nation.

The convention also considered several resolutions. The delegates unanimously adopted a resolution urging the Legislature to present to the voters a proposal for a state constitutional convention. Such a convention would have to be approved by three fifths of the Legislature and voted for by a majority of the people.

A proposal calling for a permanent ceiling on state spending was defeated 42-41, according to Reiser.

Nebraskan Applauds

Newly initiated members of the Agronomy Club are: Richard Ronnenkamp, Charles Juricek, Phillip Harlan, Michael Lund, Jerry Miller, Hubert Boelts, Charles Pohlman and James Schepers.

New officers of Alpha Zeta, agricultural honorary fraternity, are Bruce Snyder, chancellor; Robert Schaffert, censor; Norman Helzer, scribe; Edward Jackson, treasurer; Lee Gove, chronicler; Vernon Leibbrandt, Agricultural Executive Board; Dr. Gleaves, adviser (one of three).

New officers for Phi Beta Lambda business club who will be installed at a Chapter Awards Banquet May 16 are LaVern Wegner, president; Louetta Velte, vice president; Judy Onken, corresponding secretary; Tami Svoboda, recording secretary; Ron Peterson, treasurer; Diane Donaldson, historian.

Theatre Chooses Last Cast

The cast for the final University Theatre production of the season, "Antony and Cleopatra," has been announced by the play's director Dr. William Morgan. Headlining the cast are Clancey Croft as Antony and Karma Ibsen as Cleopatra.

This will be Croft's first appearance on the Howell stage. He is a graduate student in speech.

Miss Ibsen appeared in the recently completed "Heartbreak House" and was last year's winner of a "Dallas" as best actress for her performance in "Long Days Journey Into Night." She is a senior majoring in speech.

Also appearing in the Shakespeare tragedy are: Tom Crawley, Octavius Caesar; Jerry Mayer as Enobarbus; Janice Clema as Cleopatra's rival in romance, Octavia; Thomas Brucks, Alexas, Cleopatra's confidant; and John Guintyas, Lepidus, ruler of one third of the Roman Empire.

Others appearing in supporting roles are: John Oblak Dean Tschetter, Everett Lawton, Mike Karel, and Susan Granata. In all nearly thirty students will appear in the production.

Dr. Morgan has commented in regard to the play that "... in light of all the publicity surrounding the motion picture version of this story, we feel that it will be well worth everyone's time, to see these two lovers as they were depicted by the greatest writer of drama in the English language, William Shakespeare."

"Antony and Cleopatra" will run May 20 thru the 23 at the University Theatre. Tickets are available at the theatre box office, Room 108 Temple Bldg., or by phoning university extension 2072.
