

Hanger Tells Guilty's Fate; Annual Ivy Day Cancelled

Guilty Raid Discloses Ugliness

Not innocent, but Guilty was the decision of Chancellor Cliff Hanger Thursday as he called off all Ivy Day activities for Saturday.

Following a raid of the Guilty's office, Hanger said that no member was innocent of the offense.

He described the situation inside those sacred walls as one of distaste, embarrassment and ugliness.

Several members cited included Skit Sortof, Frank Arch, Larri Frantic, John What's His Name, Buss Maddening and John Lickstone.

All Sortof could say was, "Well, I gave up everything this year and refused to do anything what else could I do."

Arch noted that once "You're a bad guy and a dirty old man, it's hard to quit."

Frantic could only say, "Well, I never did like agriculture and this is my way of showing it."

Lickstone held Maddening's hand while Maddening said, "Well philosophically speaking I really didn't do anything but I thought about it a lot."

Hanger also reported that all candidates being considered for the Guilty position Saturday would be investigated as to their aims with this "horrible project."

The 11st subpoenaed of Saturday takings included many names—Bill Hamsire, Jim Kanyoun, F.C. Scream, Jay Letgo, Bob Milligram, Gary Nosen, Larri Joinsin and others.

Contacted by the Daily Pink each candidate pleaded, "Innocent, Innocent, Innocent, Innocent."

Hanger also reported that the Guilty ones' mates—alias the Pick Dots—were being investigated.

The mates' representative, Babe Beckin could only say that no one would know until he and Jim Innocent DeMush's book came out. (Even their friends don't know their relationship.)

Hanger took many hours describing the things the Guilty's had done—he illustrated each point for several hours. The description was vivid, detailed and meaningful.

He continually illustrated the points—and most of his statements could be summed up in the plea, "only if the Guilty's would stop, only if everyone would stop, only if meanwhile back at the University another faculty member would stop resigning."

Men Need Curfews; Will Get Campuses

Chancellor Cliff Hanger announced Thursday that "in order to protect the reputation of this University—even though it soon may be without faculty unless they stop resigning—the Board of Rejects has decided to use its power of in loco parentis and organize an Association of Men Students."

Hanger continued that Pat Hedgehubs (first cousin to both Dam Hedgehog and Fan Inbibes) would be temporarily appointed AMS president.

In an interview with the Pink Eye, Hedgehubs admitted, "I always thought that in loco parentis had to do with crazy parents but if Cliffie and G. Bobby (dean of student affairs) want me to help I will do all I can to serve... demerits and campuses and calls to court."

"Maybe we can do something about this exodus from the classrooms," he continued, "by camping all the faculty for a full year."

Hedgehubs explained that the AMS program would include two areas—service and judicial.

"We haven't figured out what we can do for programming or service," he said, "but we're sure it will be broadening and beneficial."

The judicial area will entail

THEY'RE RESPONSIBLE... the University's biggest problem rests on their heads, the crowd yelled, as the Guilty's tried to flee the campus in a plane from the Beta's front yard.

'A Real Break'... Deferments To Be Revoked

All student draft deferments for Nebraska residents will be revoked as of Friday, according to Col. Frank Brake of the Nebraska not-too Selective Service.

In making the announcement of the unexpected move, Brake said that at least 48 other states are expected to follow suit within the next few days. "President Lyle Jonston," Brake said, "is giving you students a real break, letting you get your service requirements over now so that you can all go to school on the G.I. Bill."

After all, Brake said, why should students stay here when "meanwhile back at the University another faculty member was resigning."

"Of course we do expect some adverse reaction from the students," Brake said, "but we feel the protests will be minimal. For example, reaction to an announced tuition increase at the University was limited to two groups."

Induction of Nebraska college students is expected to begin within the next two weeks, temporary supplemental training camps are being set up across the country to handle an overflow of recruits. Brake said about 100 per cent of the recruits will be designated for duty in Viet Nam.

Immediate reaction among campus leaders varied. "It certainly is a beautiful day," Dam Hedgehog, AWS president, noted.

ANUS President Terri Shaft angrily declared, "I plan to reserve a room in the Union so that students can come to me and discuss their feelings on the matter."

Steve Church, ANUS senator, declared "This is against the student Bill of Rights, let's hold an open convention."

"My enrollment predic-

Builders, Hellpan To Merge

A merger was announced Thursday between two of the oldest University organizations.

Builders and Hellpan issued a joint statement from their presidents, Jim Canyon and Enema Summerer announcing that "in order to further the best interests of our college community, we feel that our two groups should unite to accomplish even greater things than we have in the past."

Their announcement was greeted with indifference on campus as meanwhile, another faculty member resigned.

Cin Drops Hours; Cliff Disagrees; Cin Now At NU

All women's rules were banished at Kansas University Thursday night and Chancellor Cliff Hanger ordered Cin Hanger to come straight home.

Miss Hanger, president of All Women Stoooges at KU, banished the rules after her father sent her a letter reminding her to be in every night by midnight.

"He can tell the women what to do at Nebraska if he wants, but he has no authority at KU," she said.

Miss Hanger noted that her father had been a little ugly lately because "meanwhile back at the University, another faculty member was resigning..."

tions," Floyd Hoover, registrar, cried.

Leading faculty members were not available for comment on the announcement.

The Hysterical Department receptionist explained that most were busy writing letters of resignation and had not heard the news.

Six Rejects, Cliff To Begin Teaching

Six members of the Board of Rejects and Chancellor Cliff Hanger resigned Thursday to take teaching positions at the University.

The seven will begin teaching with the summer session. "We expect to begin at the lowest level and work our way up by merit, just as any faculty member, Reject P. N. Greentree said.

"I feel I speak for all the Rejects when I say we felt this is the best way to solve the teacher shortage," Board President Clem Swingle said. "We ought to draw more on the resources of our own great state in hiring teachers," Swingle concluded.

Swingle will take a post in the Business College, Greentree in the college of Medicine and Hanger will be on the Agricultural College staff. Other appointments will be announced later.

The Board corporation secretary Joseph Slewfoot did not resign with the others. "Some one has to stay on," he said. New Rejects may be elected, Slewfoot said.

He added that he feels a better means of selection would be to have prospective candidates give five minute talks before the Faculty Senate and then let the resigning faculty vote on the matter.

Hanger was reportedly out of town, possibly on his way to Turkey on foot, and was not available for comment.

Meanwhile, back at the University, seven additional faculty announced resignations as they heard of the appointments of the...

PLANS... for the Union's expansion are rather confusing, but Mr. Benet and his able night assistant Mr. Keith promise that the building will be unique and draw many new faculty members to the University.

Cornshocker On Pro; Pinkey Puts Up Bail After Insight Search

The Cornshocker staff has been placed on social probation following an all-night orgy held at the home of the editor, Babe Beckin.

University police, who broke up the proceedings at 6 a.m., described the scene as "lewd."

A Cornshocker staff member, Jim DeMush, was charged with "resisting arrest at the scene of the crime." He allegedly struck a minion of the law with a copy of the 1965 Cornshocker.

The entire staff was immediately placed on social probation. University officials expressed shock and dismay concerning the students' behavior.

According to well-informed sources, a student march will be held soon to protest "immorality" in student publications.

Members of the legislature expressed unanimous disapproval of the orgy. One prominent law-maker indignantly declared that the University appropriation would be "slashed in half" as a protest to student excesses.

A campus police spokesman hinted that the University may be put under martial law. "I'm sure the ROTC could be used to maintain order," he said.

The ever-defiant DeMush was full of thunderbolts against society, the law and the administration.

"This is a crime against humanity," he cried as he posted bail. "We did it in the name or responsible journalism."

DeMush explained that the Cornshocker staff had engaged in their activity only to gain a better insight into the activities they recorded all year for the Cornshocker.

Not all comment about the Cornshocker staff's behavior was bad. Members of the Pink Eye staff put up bail for the rest of the Cornshocker staffers. A spokesman for the Pink Eye explained, "Since our offices are so close together, we know about the pressures and frustrations that have been driving them all year. We were only surprised that this hasn't happened earlier."

Various members of the University faculty attempted to interpret the student's crimes.

A member of the faculty of the School of Journalism declared, "They are just products of their times."

Miss Beckin explained the whole incident by walking briskly out the door and yelling afterall, "Meanwhile back at the University another faculty member was resigning..."

Raids Replace Games

In an unprecedented reversal of its 1956 decision, the University administration yesterday cancelled the annual Spring Day celebration in favor of organized house raids and inter-campus water fights.

Preliminary scrimmages will start at 5 p.m. tonight for the house raids, as the occupants of each housing unit practice storming the walls of neighboring establishments.

After the first eliminations, all University women will converge on the corner of 17th and Vine streets for the march on Bother Hall.

The password for entrance into the men's dormitory will be See How Orderly Rioters Terrify Students (SHORTS). The coeds will then march around Bother and Mabel Halls seven times trumpeting the password.

Said Dean of Women Heller Snidely, "We are expecting a statement by the Rejects to crumble the walls of the two buildings and help us in our raid."

The men will also have a chance to display their skill at organized raiding later in the evening as they begin mass demonstrations outside Women's Ridiculous Hall.

Rumor has it that Mrs. Stinke, resident director of WRH, has refused to join the night's festivities and will stand in the doorway of WRH, barring entrance to all fun-seeking raiders.

Steeple Hangoverford, an admitted expert in such raiding maneuvers, stated, "Stinke shouldn't be much of a problem to trained veterans such as myself."

Perhaps the main event of the whole evening will be the inter-campus water fight. This activity was developed to reduce the tension between East Campus and City Campus occupants. According to Administration officials, the therapeutic benefits will be considerable.

Ken Bal, is president of the East Campus water army and Stewed Highly from city campus will temporarily switch his allegiance from more spirited beverages to captain the city campus water army.

Baby admitted that the West campus army was numerically superior, but noted that his side has the element of surprise in their favor.

"Don't tell anyone, but we are planning to release the dairy herd along 16th street as a diversionary tactic," said Baby.

Baby won the coin toss and has chosen the scene of battle to be near the debris located at 3601 Apple Street. Combat outposts will be positioned strategically at points between

Columns To Have Music

Music will be piped to the University columns beginning Sunday night, according to the new student welfare chairman of ANUS.

Twiddle And-Dee, recently appointed student welfare chairman, said that the Union has music, so why shouldn't the columns.

"The music should be where the students are, and as their representative, I think this is the first thing which must be done," she stressed.

"When I was elected," Miss And-Dee said, "they chose me 'cause they knew I would understand their real problems, and this is the most important."

She noted that Nebraska would have almost everything if only the columns were more musical.

Miss And-Dee led an argument for approximately 68 minutes before agreeing that besides piping in music, the Can's shouldn't sing on the steps twice a week.

Terri Shaft, ANUS head, noted that it was senators like this who really know the school's problems, and what difference does it really make since, "meanwhile back at the University, another faculty member was resigning..."

2 Candidates Say Pink Eye 'Unfair'

An unfair inch and paragraph count suit against the Pink Eye was filed in the Lancaster County Court by Diane Slowith and Barb Quiet Thursday.

Miss Slowith and Miss Quiet, who had been candidates for president of a women's police training society, displayed inch by inch evidence.

They both said that a fair reporter would have made up ideas for them so that their accounts would have been as long as the winning candidates.

The Pink Eye's only comment was, "Meanwhile back at the University another faculty member was resigning."

Rush On Library As Books Added

Love Library officials announced today the addition of 69 volumes of Kama Sutra.

They denied reports that the books had been ordered by Administration and said only that "We always try to serve University students and the resigning faculty."
