

Bufs Lead Huskers In Rushing Offense

Big 8 Sports Information
Colorado's sleeping offensive herd awakened Saturday to give the Big Eight Conference its first team-total offense day of the year over 450 yards and at the same time a new team rushing-offense leader.

Led by squirting little Dan Kelly, a late change at quarterback, who ran for 156 yards and passed for another 86 to card 242 of the 455 total the Buffaloes got, Colorado has the rushing lead with its 208.6 per-game average.

The big day for the Buffs also lifted them into second in total offense with a 317.4 per-game mark, just 43 total yards shy of Nebraska's accumulation for the year. The Cornhuskers, incidentally, rank second to Colorado in rushing offense, 10 yards a game back.

Thus the stage is set for one of the real key games in the Big Eight this year—Nebraska at Colorado Saturday.

The feature will be the rushing offensive leaders against the Cornhusker monsters, who continue to show off an awesome rushing defense, headed by Wayne Meylan, Carel Stith, and Jim McCord. This defense has been limiting opponents to a Big Eight record low level of only 46 yards a game.

In the head-to-head fight between Oklahoma and Nebraska for team statistical domination, the weekly change in scoring defense came again as Oklahoma grabbed the top spot, shutting out Kansas, while Nebraska was racked for 10 points by Kansas State.

Oklahoma's allowance level is now five a game, while Nebraska's is just over seven a game. A new challenger has come in this division with Missouri's third shutout of the year. The Tigers now show an allowance of just over seven a game.

Otherwise, Oklahoma continued to reign in passing offense (133 yards a game), holding off an Iowa State push which moved the Cyclones to second with 134.8, and in passing defense (91.8 allowance), where Oklahoma State is the current threat six yards back.

The scoring-offense lead again belongs to Oklahoma (25.8 points). Nebraska is still tops in total offense (326) and total defense Husker "Black Shirt" defensive specialists corral K-State fullback Cornelius Davis in Saturday's Homecoming game. Davis came into the game as the Big Eight's leading rusher but could only manage 42 yards on 16 carries against Nebraska.

13,000 Nebraskans To Migrate For Cornhusker-Buf Game

By Bob Flasnick
Sports Editor

Can a Nebraska team that for the most part this season played just well enough to win expect to beat Colorado using the same formula? The answer will come this Saturday at Boulder as the Huskers dig into the tough half of their 1966 schedule.

The game with the Buffs is the Nebraska migration and some 13,000 Nebraska fans are scheduled to make the trip to the Rockies.

Nebraska Ticket Director Jim Pittenger reports that approximately 11,000 Husker fans have purchased tickets, and he estimates that another 2,000 Nebraskans have bought tickets via the Colorado ticket office.

The Buffaloes, a popular pre-season pick to unseat Nebraska from the Big Eight title, have been having their ups and downs like Nebraska, but the Huskers are still undefeated while the mountain boys have dropped two games so far.

They were beaten by Miami University 24-3 in their season opener and dropped a conference game to Oklahoma State, 11-10.

The Buffaloes found the Kansas State Wildcats one point tougher, scorewise, than did Nebraska, beating them 10-0 in their third third game of the season. Nebraska's margin against the K-State was 11 points.

But while Nebraska was given fits by K-State, the Buffaloes appeared to be gaining momentum as they walloped Iowa State 41-21 at Ames.

possibly miss the Colorado game with a leg injury described as a swollen knee.

Already on the injured list are halfback Ron Kirkland and right end Dennis Richnafsky.

Should Carstens be missing at Colorado, the Husker secondary will be without their fastest performer.

The Buffs were led by quarterback Dan Kelly who ran for 156 yards and passed for 86, and in the process, directed his team to 455 yards total offense against the Cyclones.

Husker coach John Melton, who scouted the Colorado-Iowa State game said he had knots in his stomach after watching the Buffs.

"Colorado's offense is much better than it was last year," said Melton, "and their defense is as good or better. They can really move the ball, and Kelly looked like a great one."

Husker defensive halfback Kaye Carstens could eight-yard line in the final play of Nebraska's Homecoming tussle, and in general played one of his best games.

"Not only did he make the big play on the last play, stopping a K-State touchdown," remarked Husker Coach Bob Devaney on Carstens' performance Saturday, "but he did a good job all day. If it hadn't been for Kaye, we would have been in real trouble."

No 'Cat-astrophe' For NU Yearlings

By Ed Icenogle
Sports Assistant

Husker freshman halfback Joe Orduna will return if his teammates give him a chance.

That is, he'll return kick-offs — for more yardage than Kansas State would like to remember.

The junior Nebraska squad held K-State to two touchdowns while racking up 40 points for itself and thereby kept Orduna from having more cracks at returns.

Orduna, who scampered for 76-yards on two returns in Nebraska's 40-13 pasting of the Wildcats Cubs Monday, set up a his own touchdown with one of the returns.

Melton added that the linemen, who he credited with a fine performance, opened up holes for Orduna and the Omaha Central speedster raced through them.

Quarterback Wilfred Minor also found the ground attack to his liking, netting 65 yards in his seven attempts.

The Husker backfield totaled 275 ground yards to only 83 for Kansas State. The Wildkittens, however, kept their side up — literally — by passing for 161 yards to 67 for NU.

The 'Cats handed NU the ball on a fumble in the opening minutes of play on the K-State five. Unable to penetrate the two, the Huskers gave it up and the Wildcats advanced to their own 33.

There, Wray Curtis, who has apparently been watching varsity punt-blocking ace Wayne Meylan, got in the way of Dennis Sweat's kick and followed the ball into the end zone for an NU touchdown.

Again in a hole a few minutes later, K-State punted to their own 43. Orduna plunged for one yard and Minor stomped around left end, then shifted course to the right and thundered 42 yards for the second tally.

Minor scored again in the second quarter from three yards with two seconds left in the half.

Harold Ahlman, who averaged 4.63 yards on 16 carries, was the next in the Cornhusker scoring column from the four. Orduna and Bill Bomberger recorded the other NU scores, the former from inches out and the latter from four yards. Kansas State's touchdowns were by Jerry Lawson on the second play of the second period and quarterback Johnny Manel from the 1½ yard line in the last frame.

IM Fields Cleared, Schedules Changed

Clearing of the intramural fields on the City Campus at 14th and Vine Street in preparation for construction of the new women's physical education building will force the intramural football schedule to be revised.

Pre-construction work on the women's PE building is scheduled to begin Wednesday, weather permitting, and will incapacitate the three intramural football fields located behind University High School.

The game schedule for teams scheduled to play on the East Campus fields will remain intact.

Intramural Director Joel Meier said Tuesday that he would try to shift some of the games scheduled for the city campus to the malls in front of the Nebraska Coliseum. "We're going to try to use the malls," said Meier, "I sure hope it works."

Because of the shift, a new schedule for football games is being prepared by Meier. He said that it would be ready either Wednesday or Thursday.

Student Bomber Can Re-enter ISU

A student conduct committee at Iowa State University issued the ruling Wednesday that John G. Stotz Jr., convicted of planting a homemade bomb on the Iowa State football field may apply for readmission to school next fall.

Stotz dropped out of school voluntarily after he was fined $500 and given a three-month suspended jail term for burying an explosive device under the turf of Clyde Williams field. The bomb was exploded by a sod rolling machine before the Nebraska-Iowa State game Oct. 1.
