ure as the service charges, is not an example of student government acting as a rubber stamp. In asking for our approval, they are asking us to show an opinion. This is the first step in the procedure of power."

"If they choose not to follow our recommendation and we are correct, we can then force the issue. In giving our approval, we are not being a rubber stamp. To be a rubber stamp is to approve without consideration."

"In some areas we are justified in making our own rules and regulations, but they are not the final word because of the 'in loco parentis' concept that the Administration and the Board of Regents works under. They have the final authority as vested in them by the people of the state," Schaaf stated. "Whether or not this concept is justifiable is presently being investigated by the Student Conduct Committee of ASUN. They are looking into whether or not we should have the ability to set our own policies free from the administration," he explained.

As a step in the direction away from this control by the administration, Schaaf recommends the establishment of a Faculty-Student-Administrative court which would have the final word in all policy matters.

"In order to make policy free from its administrative control, we must show that we have earned this ability. For it is a privilege to be granted us, and not a right. We could prove our ability to rule ourselves through showing ourselves responsible in such a court," he declared.

"The administration must give us the opportunity to prove our ability to be responsible in deciding on matters outside of the classroom," Schaaf declared.

Haverford College Drops Policy Of Class Ranking

Haverford, Pa. (CPS) — The practice of evaluating college students by their rank in class is "academically indefensible" according to officials at Haverford College, who announced recently that they would no longer maintain such lists.

"It seems clear," concluded Dr. Borton, "that the fact that a student's numerical rank in class will be used to determine his draft status is interfering with the best selection of courses."

which evaluates a student's record in comparison with other students at the college is not a part of his own record."

Dr. Borton contended that a student's choice of courses within requirements for his degree, should be based "only on the potential intellectual value and interest of the course."

In addition, Haverford adds, pointing out that every class must have a "lower quarter" said they feared the emphasis on class rank is encouraging some "potentially fine students" to go to less competitive institutions.

College representatives said that its registrar will no longer prepare a class rank list for future classes. Inquiries will be answered with a statement that the college has abandoned numerical ranking. Haverford transcripts sent to other institutions will be accompanied by a detailed explanation of the college's grading procedures.

Dr. Borton said Haverford recognized that a student's transcript, containing his own record at the college "is his own property and that he may use his transcript in any way he chooses."

However, the official added, "Interpretive data

The pledge class officers of Pi Beta Phi are Pat Austin, president; Jane Westcott, vice president; Cathy Cleveland, secretary; Tina Christensen, treasurer; Susan Riggie, scholarship chairman; Marti Gottschak, social chairman; Kathy Kuethe, activities chairman; Becky Reinhardt and Diane Belly, censors; Susan Jenkins, songleader.

Deferments End At ISU For Fifth-Year Students

An estimated 200 Iowa State University students have lost their student draft deferments because they were "not making satisfactory progress toward graduation."

At least three local draft boards have begun reclassifying students as 1-A because the students are taking longer than they should in getting their degrees.

"Normal progress" means that a student on a four year course of study must graduate in four years to be entitled to a student deferment, according to Col. Glenn R. Bowles, director of the state Selective Service System.

He said that a student must complete enough credits each year to advance in class ranking to continue his deferment.

The Iowa State faculty complained that the boards were not deferring students on the basis of class ranking and student draft deferment tests.

They said they had advised students to take lighter academic loads if it would better their academic performances.

Many students who were working or taking especially difficult courses were advised to take fewer hours. Now they are in trouble for it.

According to class ranking criteria a student must be in the upper half of the male members of his class in his freshman year, the upper two-thirds in his sophomore year and the upper three-fourths in his junior and senior years to be eligible for a deferment.

If a student's class ranking is not high enough to make him eligible for a deferment he may still be deferred if he scores 70 or more in the service's college qualification tests.

Bowles said class rankings are "too nebulous" to judge whether students are making sufficient progress toward a degree. Several of the students reclassified had B averages or better.

The average ISU graduate has spent 13 quarters in school and only 20 per cent received their degree in 12 quarters or four academic years.

Bowles said he had no information that students at other universities and colleges in Iowa were being reclassified.

A public relations officer at Selective Service Headquarters in Washington D. C. said he would make arrangements if desired to have Gen. Lewis Hershey, national director of the Selective Service System, speak by telephone with any group of students or faculty who wanted the "satisfactory progress" clause explained.

Fred Schlunz, registrar for Iowa State, said that the Selective Service System should stick to what it set originally last spring—that they would base classification on rank and test scores.

Where Is Beelzebub? Innocents' Buffalo Gone

"Beelzebub is missing. Our 75-pound buffalo has disappeared!" wailed Terry Schaaf.

The Innocents' buffalo head named Beelzebub made the trip to Colorado, but was discovered missing Thursday. The buffalo rode to Colorado on the band bus, but was never unloaded since the band did not arrive in time for the ceremony.

Beelzebub came back on the bus, was unloaded and left outside the music building. The Innocents, who thought the buffalo was inside the building, didn't go to pick him up until Thursday, when they discovered he was missing.

"We must get Beelzebub back," said Schaaf, "He must be returned to his home at Antelope Park Pavilion basement."

Anyone knowing of the whereabouts of Beelzebub, or of a reasonable facsimile, is urged to contact the Innocents.

"Any fraternity house that has Beelzebub will meet serious consequences," said Schaaf.

The teach-in is expected to draw people from throughout the Great Plains area as well as local inhabitants.

The University teach-in is one of the first across the country to concentrate on the concept of Black Power. It coincides with a similar program being hosted at Berkeley Saturday.

He also will participate in the review session of the Institute for Certifying Secretaries in Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 3-6.

Dr. Dudley Bailey, chairman of the English Department, will address the Arkansas Education Association's English section in Little Rock Nov. 3.

Professor Bailey's topic is "Teach the Language." The talk will be designed to encourage English teachers to study recent scholarship on the language.

resented by Mike James.

In fact, says Haverford, class rank is not only "imprecise", but use of this criterion in Selective Service procedures is forcing to sidestep courses which might be more educationally beneficial to them in favor of classes where grades are likely to be higher.

Haverford officials admit that the emphasis placed on class rank by the Selective Service system brought the issue to a head.

But they quickly add that they have long been uneasy about an evaluation system that "compares the incomparable" and lets a tenth of a percentage point place one student ahead of another.

"The decision to abandon class ranking was made clearly and only for academic reasons," asserts Dr. Hugh Borton, the institution's president.

He cited instances where an increasing number of students have advised the dean that they were not taking certain courses because of an anticipated lower effect on their class standing.
