Faculty Studies Means Aid To Total Education

EDITOR'S NOTE: This article continues from page 1.

The University of Nebraska, through the efforts of President D. L. Shattuck, has provided a report that summarizes the economic impact of the university on the state economy. The report, entitled "Faculty Studies Means Aid To Total Education," was prepared by the independent research firm of KPMG Peat Marwick Main. The report's findings are based on an analysis of the university's economic impact on the state economy.

The report notes that the University of Nebraska has a significant economic impact on the state economy, generating billions of dollars in economic activity each year. The report highlights the university's role in driving economic growth and development in the state, and emphasizes the importance of continued support for the university's mission.

The report's findings are based on a comprehensive analysis of the university's economic impact on the state economy, and provide a valuable resource for policymakers, educators, and stakeholders. The report's findings can be found in the attached document.