E-Week activities conclude; competition winners named

By Jim Berryman

More than 220 UNL engineering students participated in a variety of competitions in E-Week's open house, the last event of the week, said the event chairman.

Bruce Elliott said that despite the week's rainy weather, this year's E-Week was a success.

"The weather hurt us," Elliott said. "We had a softball tournament planned, but it got rained out."

Elliott said the planned pig roast was also not attended as well as he had expected because of the weather.

"But overall, the week ran real smooth and was very successful," he said.

The open house was at the Nebraska Engineering Center Saturday and featured eight categories of competition, Elliott said. In the agricultural engineering category, Susan de Shazer, Jim de Shazer and George Meyer won first place for their project entitled "The Determination of Absorption and Reflection of Light from Paint."

In the chemical engineering category, Gregory A. Chapman won first place for his project entitled "Solar Distillation of Ethanol."

In the civil engineering category, Karen Coen and Hoa Dang were winners for their project "Hydrology — Peak Flows and Flood Plain Management."

In the computer science division, Randall A. Netherda was the winner for "Chatterbug: A Portable Speech Synthesizer for the Orally Handicapped."

In the construction management division, Andrew R. Bailey was the winner with "Critical Path Scheduling for Construction."

In the electrical engineering category, Tammy Meedel, Bonnie Presnell and Mark Bauer were the first place team for their project "Force Distribution of the Human Foot."

In industrial engineering, Dave Clifton, Gary Gross and Paula Obert took first place for their project, "Robotics."

In the mechanical engineering division, Bruce Burnside, Scott Hanson, Ron Schmitt and Terry Stormberg were the combined first place winners for their project "UNL-Sponsored 'High Mileage Car.'"

Each category winner was then judged in overall competition, Elliott said, with the mechanical engineering project finishing first, the chemical engineering project second and the electrical engineering project third.

Another of the week's highlights, Elliott said, was the Road Rally. In the rally, participants were given a city map of Lincoln and followed instructions that took them all over Lincoln and Lancaster County. The winners, Brian Dehning and Phil Cortum, were picked according to the fastest time and the least amount of gas used.

There is so much improvement, Umoren said, that he has never seen anyone mugged at the center or even seen any windows broken by vandals.

He's not sure how Malone got a "bad reputation," but Umoren said he hopes enough people will attend "Music Festival '84" so misconceptions can be cleared away.

There is no charge for the program, but, Umoren said, a donation is requested at the door to help build funds for the non-profit organization.
