Band . . .

The band prefers to play in Lincoln, where a much more creative atmosphere exists. Vandenberg said Lincoln audiences are more supportive of the original material than are audiences in Kearney or Omaha, which he called "a cultural wasteland."

Lincoln's creative music scene comprises two genres: the hardcore punk and synthesizer art music. The Sacred Cows plays a combination of the two forms, using a hard guitar edge with the addition of a Casio keyboard, played by Hasty.

"We're not art-bearers and we're not hardcore. Maybe we're the best of both worlds."
