Conference promotes older worker as viable person

One hundred people are expected to attend a Governor's Mini-Conference on Older Workers. It will be held May 14 at the Cornhusker Hotel to encourage Nebraska businesses to hire workers over 55 years old.

"The goal is to acquaint the Nebraska businessperson with the fact that the older worker is a viable person who could be a contributing factor in their businesses," said Darrel Seng, the Nebraska Department on Aging public information director.

The mini-conference is sponsored by Gov. Bob Kerrey, the Nebraska Department on Aging and the Nebraska Department of Labor's Division of Job Training. It is the first mini-conference on aging in several years, Seng said.

"We are an aging society," Seng said. Nebraska's older workers, 55 years and older, are the most rapidly expanding work force in Nebraska, he said.

"You've got to utilize the older workers more and more," Seng said.

Anna Marie Buchmann, vice president of Human Resources with Bankers Life and Casualty Company in Chicago, will give the Keynote address, "One Company's Experience with Older Workers." The address will describe the successes and benefits Banker's Life received by hiring older workers, Seng said.
