

Daily Halfaskan

Free basketball poster inside

Friady, May 3, 1984

University of No-Learning

Voluable 1, No. 1

Drink finals coffee and sleep, sleep, sleep

By Jonathan Seagull

A motion was passed to serve decaffeinated coffee and tea during dead week and finals by the Nebraska Grunion Bored Tuesday night.

Biff Fischhead, Ken-L-Rations committee chairman, introduced the motion in order for it to coincide with the Nebraska Grunion's annual 10 cents coffee and tea, "Sleep through Finals" campaign. Fischhead, who asked not to be identified, said the motion was tongue-in-cheek. "But before I knew it someone seconded the motion and a vote was taken."

Laughter was so intense as the vote took place, several members choked on the complimentary beer and pretzels served at each meeting. "What a great joke," said Mercy Messy, bored president, "There'll be all of these coffee-logged bodies sleeping all over the union, and when they wake up they'll say, 'I better get some more of that 10¢ coffee.'"

Swanson Dinner, Grunion director, said the decaffeinated drink idea had economic ramifications. "Off the record, we have the chance to really make up where the gourmet coffees in the bakery lost us money."

The Grunion Bored also voted to renovate the office space now occupied by the Daily Halfaskan into a new women's lounge and restroom. "We got to feeling sorry for those women who had to trudge all the way up to second floor to lay around," Dinner said. "Besides, those swell paintings in the old lounge don't go well with the modern motif computer terminals present."

Looney Barks, Daily Halfaskan editor in chief, questioned the bored's space allocation proposal. "It stinks, we've taken crap but they've never come right in and actually started pooping on us," Barks said.

Dinner said the Daily Halfaskan's space was selected because it is easier for women to go down stairs than up them. "It's easier for women to go down stairs than up them," he said.

The bored has yet to find another space for the Halfaskan, but is considering relocating the publication to the Nebraska State Historical Society or letting it share the office with the Women's Resource Center.

The issue of the Nebraska Bookstore relocation renovation would not be as easy to deal with, Dinner said. "To get everyone who buys books into the bookstore at one time would be just impossible." Right now the Grunion Bored is looking at something along the lines of a Neutron or chemical weapon... "We certainly don't want to deface any University property," Dinner said.

Crack Undressin/Daily Halfaskan

Who says baseball isn't a contact sport? NUL third baseman Boog Urs prepares to boot Northeastern Ontario's Speedy Romper back to second base after Romper stole third in Thursday's game. The Schuckers won 684-0. For the complete story, see another paper.

Buffy holds nose at Geek Store

By Swill Lasaki

A spokesman for The Geek Store, new to NUL, announced Thursday that the store will close today after the all greek F.A.C. it will host in the store's party room.

"I was really psyched for this store but I guess my idea didn't find the beef," said Buffy Carrington, store owner, as she shook her blonde head from side to side.

The staggering loss of three Kappa Kappa Gamma beach towels in a robbery on April 26 threw the store into a state of financial limbo, said Buffy. She said later that same week a KKG sorority member came into the store wearing one of the stolen beach towels and Buffy confronted the girl about it.

"Then that little petite so and so broke my nose with a Sigma Alpha Epsilon squash racket," said Buffy. "It ruined my beautiful nose and got blood on that squash racket. That racket was worth $300 you know," she quipped.

"My nose was broken and I had to pay for plastic surgery and I had to miss an alumni luncheon at the Hyatt Regency that week," Buffy said violently as she shook her blonde locks in disgust.

Buffy's husband, Skip Carrington, said the loss of the lovely beach towels and the cost of Buffy's new nose were the reasons for the demise of the store.

"We couldn't have Buff going to parties with that nose, she just wouldn't fit the mold," said Skip.

Buffy and Skippy said all store assets would be donated to the greek system at NUL. They said their goal was to have everyone wearing the same clothes and beach towels by this summer.

"There's strength in similarity," they added as they got into their soon to be repossessed mercedes.

A quick check of NUL greek houses revealed that all greeks were shocked to learn of the store's demise.

"I was so psyched when I first heard about the store and now I won't have anywhere to get my pink panties with the Delta Gamma emblem," giggled Kayla Chartreuse, DG social chair.

Joey Lacoste, Kayla's party man, said that "the stores closing is really a downer because me and my Sig Ep brothers were going to get our house rugby shirts there with a beer keg on the front," he said as he hugged Kayla.

"I guess sometimes you gotta say, 'what the heck,'" Joey said as he fiddled with Kayla's dyed hair.

Tonie Lauren, Panhellenic party girl, said that the whole university community would feel the loss of the store.

"It's really a poopy shame that it got robbed and poor Buffy got her pretty nose cracked," Tonie chirped. "But I guess you can't go to a luncheon and keep a straight face with a broken nose, OOoh my!"

We spoofed!

Today's Daily Halfaskan marks the return of our semi-annual joke issue. With finals just around the corner, we think students, faculty and administrators need a chance to laugh at the everyday foibles of university life.

Any similarities between persons named in the Daily Halfaskan and persons living in the Central Time Zone are purely coincidental.

Recycled ANUS could produce future legislators

ANUS has announced a program to make NUL the first major university to effectively recycle all of its senators.

Under this new program, all senators who have suffered mental breakdown during their term will be put in desk containers and dumped into recycling barrels where they will be blindfolded and spun three times. Afterwards, they will be nominated for a unicameral seat.

"For the program to succeed, colleges and campus organizations must participate," said ANUS President L. "Bo" Grease. "Every college should help its senator beef up a resume and help them come up with stupid ideas that will keep ANUS from doing something productive. Thus, their senator will eventually go mad and be qualified to serve on the state level."

This new program expands on ANUS recycling that already is done on campus, said Grease.

"For the past few years, we've attempted to get our most insane senators re-elected," he said. We feel it's time we advance to the state level."

In other actions, ANUS decided to make all drinking fountains in the Union self-adjust their height for each individual user. By August, drinking fountains will be equipped with buttons reading "high," "higher," and "highest."

"Buttons up!" said Grease with a giggle after the final vote was cast.

"Just think," Grease said, "we're on the forefront of technical advancement."

Grease said he is confident that decisions like this need to be made on the state level.

"Right now it's the school," he said, "soon it'll be the State. The next year the country and finally the world."

Today

Inside

- NUL students tell what they think about dogs names Steve in today's Campus Mis-quotes ..... Page 2
- It's been a beautiful day in the neighborhood ever since Uncle Ronnie took office ... Page 3
- The Daily Halfaskan corrects its errors from previous editions ..... Here, There, Everywhere

Index

Arts and Entertainment.....	0
Iditorial .....	2
Mistakes .....	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8
Iditorial .....	2
Off The Wall .....	3
Serious Mistakes .....	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8
Spurts .....	6