

Finals, finals: Fun in sun for everyone

Last week a janitor discovered in a musty corner of the Daily Nebraskan Office a tightly rolled and slightly yellowed bundle. Fearing the worst, she opened the bundle, and met her fears.

Christopher Burbach

She had found the Newsroom Scrolls containing the poetry of one Ernst Bloch, a chronicle of rhyme, if not verse, of one student's trials and tribulations through his college career. Here are some choice extracts from Bloch's text about finals week.

*Finals, finals are lots of fun;
Finals are fun for everyone.
Study hard, get a good grade,
It's easy as drinking lemonade.
So put your face into your book,
Don't give that clock another look,
Coffee costs just one dime,
And sleep is just a waste of time.*

Another of Bloch's jewels was addressed to a procrastinating friend who hadn't studied all semester and lacked motivation to begin so late.

*"My friend,
Knowledge is healthy;
And you must pass this test,
If you want to be wealthy,
You've put it off long,*
