EDITORIAL NOTES.

IS the oratorical association ever to be revived? From the appearances of matters now oratory is not going to receive much attention during the year.

THE efforts of the Bee to prejudice certain parties against the University met with a stinging rebuke. The attack was entirely uncalled for and bore upon its face evidences of falsehood. In the future we hope that those who cannot tell the truth about us may at least refrain from talking.

THE students parade Saturday before election showed plainly on which side the brains and culture of Nebraska were arrayed in the fight against the liquor traffic. Lincoln's three universities were well represented but everything considered the Wesleyan made the best display.

IT gives us much pleasure to note the favorable mention that has lately been made of several of the University professors. Although a young institution the University has secured the services of several men of national reputation. It is by the work of its scholars that an educational institution acquires a reputation.

ALTHOUGH the library is not open in the evenings and although the efforts of THE HESPERIAN to bring about such a result evidently have not impressed themselves very strongly upon the powers that be, yet we feel that we have done our duty and rendered a service to those who will one day enjoy that which we are denied.

IT is not our desire to pose before the public as chronic kickers. Hence this time we are not going to propose any plans for opening the library in the evening, nor are we about to offer suggestions for beautifying the campus, nor for enlarging the drill grounds, but we do think that a few more hitching posts ought to be put down around the University buildings. The cost for this would be trivial, while the conveniences derived would be great. For this reason we venture to mention the matter and hope that it at least will receive some consideration.
