The Whi taker Courtmartial. Special Dispatch to The Bee.

New York, February 19-1 a. m .-At the Whittaker courtmartial yester-day a young girl, Etta Denike, was placed in the witness chair, and said that she lived with Col. Lazalle's fareily at West Point. She testified to having received a bundle containing a bloody handkerchief, and pieces of belting from Drummer Knittle, and to having washed them, and to have then given them back to the colonel. She untied the knots in the belting with a fork, as they were tied too hard for her to untie with her hands. Col. Lazelle was recalled, and briefly questioned as to his giving a handkerchief and belting to his orderly, and receiving them back from his servant. E. T. McEnany, clerk in the quartermaster's department at the military academy, identified the handkerchief offered in evidence as similar to those issued to cadets.
