The tambourine dance consists of a small musical instrument of that name, to which eight knots of ribbon are fastened, four red ones for the ladies, four white ones for the gentlemen. At a given signal the knots are pulled, the tambourine falls apart, and the ladies and gentlemen find themselves curiously fastened to the white ribbons which the gentlemen had pulled. The unexpected partners then danced together and the fun begins.

An ugly, cross, hordid, hateful, cynical, exchange says: A lady graduate of medicine in Washington has been tendered the position of resident physician on one of the largest Indian reservations in the West.
We hope she will accept and proceed there

Among the novelties in dress ornaments Among the novelties in dress ornaments are white or gray mother-of-pearl rings destined for the cordolieres, which lace over the waists. These rings have two holes, like ordinary buttons, to fasten them against the dress. Before the waist is faced it must be hooked underneath by means of a false band. Another new article is a double fastening of mother-of-pearl or passementerie. The waist closes down the front as it does for the pearl rings, and the ornaments are down the centre of the waist and suits. White mother-of-pearl clasps are charming over light-colored costumes.
