POPPLETON'S PISTOL.

Nephew of Hon. A. J. Poppleton Kills a Burglar.

And is Wounded Himself, But Not Mortally.

Tuesday, stated that a burglar had been killed at that place by the occupant of tunately for Mr. Smalley and fortunately for Mr. Charlton, the latter had the house he attempted to rob. Later not given the former a receipt for the dispatches give the occupant as Orrin Poppleton, who is a brother of Hon. & Co. for the value of the horse.

and going across the yard, found the north window of the store open. Edgar Poppleton directed Cooper to go to the southeast corner of the store and slam a $2,253,650 small gate, to alarm the burglar, anticipating that he would come out of the pen window, which he did immediately after, and when he put his head and upper part of his body out of the window, Poppleton ordered him to halt and throw up his hands. Instead of obeying, the man fired at Poppleton, who dodged and fired at the same instant, hitting the burcoming out the back of his neck. of young Poppleton's pistol missed fire and the burglar fired again as he jumped to the ground. Poppleton then clinched him, grasping his pistol arm, but not so tightly but that he got in a third shot on Poppleton, who kept close to him, breast burglar lived about three hours after being shot. A DETROIT DETECTIVE have required no little nerve to grapple with him. Mr. Edgar Poppleton is restof his recovery, notwithstanding his very dangerous wounds.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT. A dispatch to the Cincinnati Commercial, from Detroit, August 20, says:

Early this morning a man was discovered in the act of effecting an entrance by the police, and gave bonds about halfto a store in the suburban village of Bir. past one o' lock this morning and were migham. The lady who saw the burglar awakened the son of the proprietor of said to a BEE reporter that he knew he the store and two others, and the four was right and was going ahead. started in pursuit of the marauder, who in the meantime had entered the store. Young Poppleton stationed himself at an open window on the ground floor of his father's store, the others going in by the rear door, which was tound unlocked. The burglar soon appeared at the window and fired his revolver at Poppleton, the bullet inflicting a slight scalp wound. Poppleton returned the fire, the ball from his revolver entering the burglar's

The burglar, new driven todesperation, leaped from the window and fired a second shot at Poppleton, which also took effect on the scalp. The two men closed and a desperate struggle ensued. The burglar being the most powerful of the two, had no difficulty in overpowering the young man. He had grasped young Poppleton by the throat and began choking him, when the latter freed his right arm and put an end to the struggles by firing three shots from his self-cocking revolver, causing the mortally wounded marauder to release his hold. He died a few moments later, but before expiring, though conscious, refused to give his name or otherwise disclose his identity. The police were notified, and the detective who was sent to inquire into the shooting identified the burglar as his next door neighbor, a man supposed to be a respectable citizen. He was known by the name of Kennedy.

HUMAN BLOOD. -On the purity and vitality of the blood depend the vigor and health of the whole system. Disease of various kinds is often only the sign that nature is trying to remove the disturbing cause. A remedy that gives life and vigor to the blood, eradicates scrofula and other impurities from it, as Hood's Sarsaparilla undoubtedly does, must be the means of preventing many diseases that would occur without its use. heaving stones through the windows of Mamie Fairchild's house. For this diversion he will pay $30 and costs and be allowed to try his muscle on the rock up at the court yard.

John Altendorfer and his wife had a bitter quarrel over some trivial subject Tuesday and so much disturbed the neighbors in their vicinity that they were arrested. They had fully resolved that they could not live together any more, but after a night's separation the wife concluded that her husband had not treated her badly at all and desired a reconciliation. The husband smiled and she rattled on in German which the court clerk, who speaks seventeen different languages, translated for his honor who reunited them in his happy manner and told them to go.

The Sad Journey Ended at the Chayenne Cemetery-A Sad and Romantic Story.

The Cheyenne Sun publishes the following sad but romantic story, which, having truth for its foundation, is truly stranger than fiction:

Yesterday morning's train from the east brought to this city Mr. Matthew Ormond, a resident of Frisco, Utah. Mr. Ormond has traveled many hundred niles, following trace after trace, and trails both false and true, in the hope of inding his father, who disappeared in October, 1881. The story of the wan-derings, trials, the detective work and the end of the search, all combine to

Now, by a misunderstanding, the son in Frisco and the son in Halleck each supposed the father was with the other. Correspondence between the two was limited and irregular, and not until a few months ago did the men learn-that the old gentleman was missing.

When Matthew Ormond ascertained that his father had started for Utah he thought that no trace could ever be obtained that would reveal the latter's whereabouts or fate. Indeed the task of finding the missing man seemed a hopeless one, for over a year had passed since Ormond, sr., had taken the cars for the west. All of those little trails that when tresh, would aid in the discovery of a missing person, had long since been obliterated by time, but Matthew Ormond is a western miner, and possessed the in-domitable perseverance and energy of his class. He determined to find his father, living or dead, and so he went from far away Utah to the little cityin Minnesota, where the search began.

TRAILING THE LOST.

It was ascertained that Ormond, senior, had purchased a coupon ticket for Salt Lake. After many weary journeyings to and fro the old man was traced to Minneapolis, and subsequently to St. Paul. There it seems he had disappeared, but facts, he gladly tendered his services. By the assistance of Auditor Gray, and the liberal use of the telegraph, the ticket, or one of its coupons, purchased by the elder Ormond at Halleck, was traced to Omaha. On to Omaha came the untiring gentleman, but again was anxious to obtain gratuitous aid, and Mr. Ormand when he ascertained the facts. For some time no further trace of the ticket or any coupon could be discov ered. Finally, however, a coupon was Brown; no deaths. Surgeon Owen is Mr. Ormand that his father had passed westward over the Union Pacific and had doubtless passed Cheyenne. No further guides were obtained, and so Mr. Ormand started over the road, searching at every town for some trace. Nothing was discovered until this city was reached, and here the long hunt ended at a lonely,

SORROWFUL FINALE.

Thus ends the tale. Mr. Matthew Ormond is a middle-aged man, of fair education, indomitable energy and fairly well-to-do. He began the search for his father under most discouraging auspices chased a coffin and mechanics are now
