

LAY REPRESENTATION.

The Methodist Conference Passes a Resolution Asking Lay Brothers to Come.

Dr. Kynett's Address in Regard to the Work of Church Extension.

The Lay Electoral conference met at the Eighteenth Street church at 2 o'clock p. m., Saturday and was opened with singing and prayer.

W. G. Olinger, of Tekamah, was chosen chairman, and David Cole, of South Third Street, Omaha, secretary.

On motion, the following was chosen a committee on credentials: D. M. Hawley, J. T. Spencer and E. M. Crowell.

On motion, the laymen proceeded to take an informal ballot for delegates to the general conference.

Haverly and Rouse were appointed tellers. This ballot resulted in a majority of votes for G. P. Hall, of Tekamah; and a motion was made to make it formal, and declare G. P. Hall the unanimous choice of this electoral conference.

On motion, the meeting proceeded to take an informal ballot in respect to a reserve delegate, but no one receiving a majority of the votes cast, at once took a formal ballot.

On motion, the meeting proceeded to take an informal ballot in respect to a reserve delegate, but no one receiving a majority of the votes cast, at once took a formal ballot.

To express its opinion on the chief question now being discussed by the church, the electoral conference passed the following:

Resolved, That the lay electoral conference of the north Nebraska annual conference is in favor of no change in the time limit in respect to pastoral service.

The following was passed also:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this electoral college that we favor a full lay representation in all our annual conferences, and that we instruct our delegate to labor to obtain such a result at the next general conference.

Dr. Kynett, secretary of the Connecticut Church Extension society, addressed the conference in the evening on the theme that all the while engages his attention, and set out the subject in a plain and mathematical way. Below is a condensed brief of

DR. KYNETT'S SPEECH.

Two questions I wish to discuss: 1. What is church extension? This department is a permanent factor in society church building.

Every church should have a corporate existence, each State having statutes respecting the incorporation of churches. When you title to secure a location, be sure that the title is not impaired.

Next, the design of the church building is an essential part of making an impression on the public. Our architects are very capable, and churches built from their plans are recognizable all over the country.

MR. WOOLWORTH'S BOOK.

THE CATHEDRAL IN THE AMERICAN CHURCH.—By James M. Woolworth. New York: E. P. Dutton & Co. S. C. Caulfield, Omaha.

Many who take up Mr. Woolworth's little book will be surprised to learn that the cathedral is so late an innovation in the American church, that at the separation from the English church our stubborn revolutionary prelates rejected everything English that was non-essentially, including the cathedral in that category.

So deep was this prejudice that not until Bishop Rip placed his episcopal chair in Grace Church, San Francisco, and called it his cathedral, about thirty years ago, was any attempt made to revive the neglected institution.

Agitation of the subject resulted in the erection of a costly edifice at Fairbault, Minnesota, Portland, Albany and other places, and to-day the importance of the cathedral in the Episcopal church and the attention paid to its details call for an intelligent guide to church workers, just such as Mr. Woolworth has compiled.

A very complete, though not extended, sketch of the cathedral system is given, from its rude and simple origins in the early days until it became a highly organized body, and a center of union to the whole diocese.

The usefulness of the council advisory to the bishop known as the chapter, is discussed, and the organization of the chapter in this State, in 1872, touched upon.

The differences in the practices of cathedrals, the cathedral as a missionary agency, the cathedral and the See city and its accessories all form subjects for different chapters.

There is also a plea for maintaining the daily office by the cathedral clergy.

In these days of schisms the cathedral will be found a healthy guide in doctrinal and ceremonial points and as their numbers increase in this country their sacred dignity and influence will be more and more a restraint upon those fantastic diversions which are prone to occur in any diocese.

The presence of the bishop's chair throws over the cathedral an importance which should protect it from petty disputations.

One of the most general interests, that will give light to the churchman and interest the general reader. Proceeding by a few weeks the completion of the Nebraska cathedral, of which the author is chancellor, and which has been constructed very largely after valuable suggestions from him, the book is, to say the least, timely.
