J. MUELLER,

against the building, had forced Dr. Cross to the wall, before the latter shot. In closing he urged that the ball should be fixed at a reasonable one.

Col. Daily made the closing argument. He spent considerable time on the fact of the prisoner having the revolver in his possession, and having made threats at various times to use it. He followed about the same line of argument in reviewing the testimony as that taken by his co-counsel, Mr. Pusey, showing malice in the various acts preceding the shooting, and premeditation.

At the close of the argument Judge Aylesworth in deciding stated that the only question for him to decide whether it was murder in the first degree, and whether the defendant shall be admitted to bail, and, if so, how much. The case, if one of murder, fell under that part of the law which provided that the killing must be wilful, deliberate and premeditated. Unless the evidence was clear, or the preponderance was great, and where the offense was committed under mitigating circumstances, the prisoner might, under the decisions of the court, be admitted to bail. If the offense was committed under the theory of Mr. Nichols' testimony it would seem wilful and premeditated, but if committed outside of those circumstances it might not be so wilful. If Dr. Cross had, as he threatened, provoked Dr. McKune to assault him that night for the purpose of having an excuse to shoot him it would have been murder in the first degree. It was difficult to get at the motives of these men. The attack by Dr. McKune, as testified to by witnesses, was not in accordance with the plan stated in Dr. Cross' threats. The court thought that, under Mr. Pusey's theory, after these threats, Dr. Cross would not have been entitled to any attempt to defend himself. Under the circumstances, as presented on this examination, he did not believe that any jury would convict of murder in the first degree, even if they did not acquit on the ground of self defense. The court, therefore, decided that the prisoner was entitled to be released on bail, and he fixed the amount at $15,000.

The court also made an order that the witnesses give their own recognizance to appear before the grand jury. There remained only the giving of the required bond and steps were at once taken to arrange that matter so as to secure Dr. Cross' release from jail. Dr. Cross was released last evening, the bail required being furnished by John Keller, J. M. Palmer and Phil Arnauer.

Transmission of Power.

The very important problem of the transmission of power from points where it is abundant, to points where it can be advantageously utilized has long baffled inventors, yet there are still electricians who believe it can be profitably done. One of them, a Frenchman named Deprez, has already undertaken to put a plan in practical operation. He placed a dynamo-electric machine on the banks of the river Romache, which affords good water-power for large turbine wheels. By means of these he transmitted to Grenoble, a distance of nine miles, sufficient to operate a factory and light 300 electric lights. The method of transmission was a copper wire, somewhat larger than the ordinary telegraph wire. About forty per cent. of the power was lost in transmission, yet the result obtained is said to afford a profitable means of running a factory in a place where fuel is exceedingly dear. Notwithstanding the many discouraging reports that have been made regarding the chances for success in transmitting the power which goes to waste in waterfalls and swift-flowing streams, there is still good reason to believe that means will be found to utilize the greater part of it. And then, too, there is the wind, the primitive power which was used for milling before the age of steam. It is usually and unprofitably, and the means of storing the electricity which may be generated by it are still imperfect; but many believe the time will come when every elevated spot, the flat roofs of all great buildings in cities, sea-beaches and many bleak, untenanted areas will be covered with wind-mills, all furnishing inexpensive power for a thousand uses. Such power will not entirely supersede steam, but will certainly find many new fields and will very greatly relieve the constantly growing drain upon the world's coal deposits.

How the Great Corporations are Trying to be Honest.

New York News.

Mr. Gould has acquired riches and influence by methods of business which most people consider questionable. His wealth and power are not all. Mr. Gould admits that he has got past money-making and it is evident that he desires to have the esteem of his fellow-citizens. He has a family, and he does not like to be constantly paraded before his sons and daughters as a thief. Naturally, therefore, within your two Mr. Gould has embraced every opportunity to pose before the public as a self-made man whose wealth has been acquired by ability, energy and honest dealing. He does not want to appear grasping or selfish. This champion speculator sailed on this tack soon after he had made himself rich through the Erie railroad plot. He began then to talk about developing the West and open up the country to immigration. He continued in this way when he was beginning the development of that scheme known as the Wabash system. He did not care so much to make money, he said, as to open up the great West to small farmers who could find, near his seats, there, pleasant little homes for their old folks and get their grain to market. Then he began associating with men who have good reputations. He has succeeded so well in this that now we see him intimate with such pious people as Mr. Morris K. Jesup and such men of position as John Jacob Astor, who only a few weeks ago was presumed to take a seat in the directory of the Western Union. Then he has been blossoming out in a domestic way. In some mysterious manner there have appeared in the columns of the papers which Mr. Gould has controlled sketches of his home life. His devotion to his family has been put bravely to the front. It is by his friends that this great man takes his delight, and he has been described as sitting often at the breakfast table with his olive branches around him. His deep love for his son George has also been a strong card. We are told when Mr. Jay Gould has been absent from New York awhile, he grows pale as he approaches the city on his return, so deeply is he moved at the prospect of seeing his family.

But the greatest opportunity for this kind was offered to Mr. Jay Gould only a few days ago by the summons of the Senate Committee on Labor and Education to appear before them. The Railroad King was prompt in attendance. What a pathetic tale he told! Did ever a poor but honest young man have a harder time to get along? Never, or at least not often. And then the picture which the rich man drew of his praying in the woods! Far be it from us to doubt that Mr. Jay Gould went on his knees, as he says he did, when he was so unhappy. Let us hope he did pray, and let us hope even more ardently that he keeps up the habit yet. From almost any point of view he needs to be prayed for more now than he did when he was young and poor. We have not much doubt that Mr. Gould will be able finally to convince a large portion of this community, which only knows him by reputation, that he is indeed a misunderstood and much-misnamed man. People who are very good themselves are naturally inclined to be charitable to others, and we shall not be surprised if presently Mr. Gould shall hold up in the pulpit as a model for young Christian soldiers to imitate. It certainly will happen, if Mr. Gould will only contribute a few thousand dollars to some poor church and let the minister understand that the gift is to be kept secret. The secret will be kept, but the pulpit of that church will resound sooner or later with the indirect praises of a good, generous man, who lets his left hand know what his right hand doeth. After that point is reached all will be easy, and finally he will die in the odor of reputation. It was a great stroke for society when Mr. Gould exclaimed before Mr. Blair's committee: "I brought nothing into this world and I can take nothing out." We may remark, perhaps, that he has taken a good deal that did not belong to him since he has been in this world, all the same.

The Date Palm in California.

Napa Reporter. At the Rixford farm, near Sonoma, Sonoma county, an interesting case of a young male date palm flowering at the age of six years from the seed was reported by J. B. Wolfkill, of Winters, Solano county, has a number of date palm trees, grown from the seed in 1877, which are now twenty-five feet high and two feet in diameter. Only two of these trees have ever shown flowers, both being females, bearing for the first time at about the age of fourteen years and one of these has continued to do so every year, being now loaded with fruit, having five large "regimes" (name given to the date bunch in date countries), averaging about twenty pounds weight in the unripe state. Another interesting case of date growing is that of G. W. Fraser of Elmira, Solano county. Mr. Fraser obtained seeds of some fresh dates just received by W. R. Strong of Sacramento. From these he raised the date palms now growing on his place, all of which are female trees. At the age of ten years they produced fruit, which, however, never ripened, as, of course, was to be expected, owing to the want of fertilization. The soil where these fruit trees are growing is also a rich, sandy, alluvial loam. Like Mr. Wolfkill's dates, they received no special care and have never been irrigated. There is no doubt that dates can be grown in Central and Southern California and as the fruit in its dried state is most delicious, orchardists beyond the humid belt might do a very wise thing to propagate them in nurseries for export by cultivators. In Terry's valley it seems more than likely the trees would bear and ripen its fruit. The blossoms come out in April or May and in its own country the palm commences bearing at from ten to fifteen years of age. The seeds can be obtained in San Francisco.

A YOUNG MAN'S CASE.

MR. S. S. HOBBS, Jr., of No. 147 Park street, Lewiston, Me., relates the following personal narrative, May 14, 1883: "About fifteen months since I had a severe attack of typhoid fever, was very lame and confined to my bed for eleven weeks, and when the fever let me was in a very debilitated condition. My back and limbs seemed to have no strength, and I had no vitality or appetite. I tried various kinds of medicine recommended by my friends, but found they did not improve my condition. I was induced to try Hunt's Remedy, which has been used with such great success here in Lewiston that it has a very enviable reputation of being a most reliable medicine. I purchased one bottle, and can date my improved health from the time I commenced using it, and my progress continued very rapidly; I gained in strength and experienced less pain in my back, my appetite increased, and after using three (3) bottles my pains were all gone, and my health entirely restored, and I can most heartily recommend Hunt's Remedy to any who may need a true remedy for debility, kidney or urinary troubles."

A GOOD MECHANIC.

Mr. L. J. Jones, of No. 10 Charles street, Portland, Me., writes us some convincing facts: "May 11th, 1883: 'I have for several years been troubled with liver complaint and indigestion, and have suffered at times terrible distress, and have tried many different cures, so-called, they have been recommended at times. I one day noticed in one of our papers the testimony of a person that had used Hunt's Remedy and been cured of diseases similar to mine. I purchased a bottle of one of our drug stores in Portland, and before I had used the first bottle found that it was improving beyond my expectations; have used several bottles, and I have no trouble from indigestion, no distress or pain back as I formerly had; and since I have been cured my wife has used it for kidney trouble and it has cured her. We can both say that Hunt's Remedy is a blessing to any that are troubled with kidney or liver diseases, or indigestion. We gladly recommend it to our friends or to any sufferers from liver or kidney diseases, and you can use this letter as you may choose for the best interest of suffering humanity."

great schemes in which he has been and is engaged. He is liberal in subscribing for memorial windows in churches, subscribes sometimes to charitable organizations, and once offered to pay the doctor's bills for Garfield's son. Immense credit is also given him nowadays for his activity in getting up the fund for the General Garfield's memory. Thus it will be seen that Mr. Field is succeeding in his efforts to be respectable as well as Mr. Gould and Mr. Vanderbilt. Doubtless when he passes away, such men as Mr. Henry E. Pellow will weep for another good and great man gone. But Mr. Pellow's emotions are easily stirred.

All this may sound uncharitable, but it is not so. To a man of average intelligence and of old-fashioned honesty, it is not an odious sight to see men who have grown gray in following out questionable schemes of acquiring fortunes, who have never hesitated at anything which would influence the stock market in their favor, and who have often been convicted of telling what they know to be false, trying in their old age to gain such regard from their fellow-men as only those who have a right to demand who have lived lives of integrity and honesty and who have never even been suspected of dishonest practices. Shall we give to these great speculators and tricksters the same respect we paid to good old Peter Cooper—that kind, honest, sometimes mistaken old gentleman? We cannot give it. It is not right that we should give it.

An Explanation.

No one medicine will cure everything, but it is an incontestable fact that Throat Electric will cure a sprain, a bruise, a bite, or an ache, and is also an active and pronounced cure for neuralgia and rheumatism.

HEAR THE WITNESSES.

SAVED FROM A HORRIBLE DEATH. Up to May last I had spent at least five hundred dollars for treatment by many of the best medical men, without any benefit. I suffered excruciatingly, and all my best friends advised me that the only chance of death was fast approaching. I caught at S. S. S. like a drowning man at a straw. After taking two bottles I could feel a change for the better. The secret began to discharge freely and the inflammation to abate. When I had taken six bottles every sore had healed and my skin began to assume a natural appearance. I persisted until I had taken twelve bottles, large size, and THERE WAS NO SYMPTOM OF THE DISEASE REMAINING, and I feel as well as I ever did. I have gained twenty-one pounds in flesh, and my friends wonder at my improved condition. I have recommended it many, and in every instance with complete success. I believe that S. S. S. has saved me from a horrible death.
