Dug Panits and his pal, Moses, are notorious roughs, who ought by good rights to be in the penitentiary. Their big fight, some menths ago, in which they were both badly chawed up has not yet been forgotten, and now they are before the public again, with a good chance of coming before the courts Last Saturday evening they went into Cresent City and, after filling up, proceeded, with others of their gang, to kick up a row in the place of David Dunkle. Dunkle finally got them out and shut up shop, but they soon returned and kicked in his doors and windows. They them went over to a dance that was in progress and undertook to clean it out, but gress and undertook to clean it out, but were themselves cowed by a loaded re-volver. They didn't like this kind of fun, so sneaked out of town; but about three miles out they found another dance, and this one they were successful in breaking up.
