HEADLICHT GLEAMS. Immense Freight Traffic of the Union

Pacific.

The Weather in Western Nebraska,

While many imagine that we are having dull times in Omaha, it is learned that the receipts by rail at this point are greater than ever before. Yardmaster Jilmore has all that he and his force can possibly attend to. He has seven switchengines at work all the time by day and five by night, employing a force of switchmen and assistants numbering forty-five. Among the important items in this department may be mentioned that the Union elevators are receiving about forty cars of grain per day. This grant is not being shipped out but stored away in the elevators. There is also a large amount of coal coming in, about fifty cars amount of coal coming in, about fifty cars the company's mines and that work will then be commenced early that work will then be commenced early forty cars of grain per day. about 1,500 tons per day. The stock season is near over, and it is learned by inquiry that the run this year Murphy, Chas. Hamilton, Themas Swobe, is not so heavy by 1,000 cars as it was J. M. Woolworth, and they have the dilast year, a falling off in shipments of 20,000 head. In 1881 there were re-ceived at this point 160,000 head; in 1882, and view the proposed site on next Sat-

180,000. The Union Pacific is really doing a tremendous business both in passenger and freight traffic, exceeding that of any previous year at the same season. They send out each day eight freight trains, averaging twenty-five car loads each, or 85 $4,600-Lot fox200, good 6 room house, modern 200 cars; 30,000 tons in all. The local business alone, outside of coal, stone and grain, averages fifty cars alone averages ten cars per day, and the receipts of potatoes five cars, or 1,500 bushels.

The Nail Works, at present is receivng about 100 cars of old iron to work up o'clock. and the Smelting Works is doing an enormous business. An average of 400 cars per day, is received, much of which is taken up from the branches. This does not look much as if there were hard times in the country.

But, it order to get the bottom facts of Vandervoort's case, the reporter was advised to call upon a a high officer of the order, and, in fact, the highest upon this coast, who would give him the "true inwardness" of the whole matter. Accordingly proceeded to the place of business of he the high official named. He agreed with his comrades in considering Vandervoort's threat an idle and impudent one, but added that it was quite consistent with the reputation he had won for himself as an arbitrary, overbearing, conceited and presumptuous man. He was very unpopular with the officials under him in the mail service on account of these traits in his character. "But how is it to be accounted for that such a man as Vandervoort appears to be so well selected as grand commander of your order?" "I will explain that. Until the Grand Encampment at Cincinnati, in 1880, where Vandervoort appeared as a dele gate from Nebraska, he was little known. He ran for the position of grand commander then, and was overwhelmingly defeated. From that until the Grand Encampment at Baltimore in 1882, he company of New York volunteers and a was whining about his defeat, and straindetachment of United States marines, ingevery nerve to get supporters with with orders to guard a battery which some success.
