"Why don't the car start?" He received no answer.

"Why don't the car start?" Still no answer.

"Gimme back my fare, then." It was not returned.

Then he jumped up, grabbed the telegraph pole around the waist, and attempted to trip it up.

College, but it would make too long a story to tell you all my experiences there. I will only say that from that point, lying near an open door, I could see many of the movements of the rebel army, including the formation and advance of Pickett's division, and could hear the yell of the rebels as they swept forward, and then the glad hurrahs of our boys when the charge was repulsed. There were fifteen of us wounded men at the College—the other 700 were rebels—and we cheered, too, when our boys did, until the rebels threatened to kill us if we didn't stop. I shall never forget the four terrible days I passed there—days of alternate hope and fear—nor the joy I felt on that morning when gray coats went away and blue coats appeared. But I'm getting back into my old habit of talking too much. Please excuse me. I'm apt to forget myself when thinking of those days.

Mischievous Malaria.

To say that malaria is mischievous is to put it very mildly. It is all that and more. It is cunning, deceitful, treacherous, sly, and underhanded. It does its work in the dark, and in such a sly way that much of the mischief is done before it is discovered.

It saps the foundations of a healthy system. It robs the blood of its vitality, demoralizes the liver, confounds the stomach, and makes the victim wish he were in his grave.
