THE LASKER LANCE.

Still Being Used To Pierce the Thick

A Final Official Shaft to Sargent

"A Matter of Regret, but Not of Con-

BISMARCK'S BILE.

FURTHER AS TO THE LASKER INSULT.
WASHINGTON, March 10.—Accompanying the president's message to the house on the Lasker resolutions, were a number of official letters and telegrams between Secretary Frelinghuysen and Minister Sargent, and between Sargent and the German imperial secretary, which seem to me that the stock market of your county have started out in the right direction by calling a public meeting. The county's board should meet and make an appropriation for the purpose of buying and destroying any animals diseased in any locality in your county. The legislature has appropriated no means nor authorized any officers to do in such matters, and all I can do is only advising.
In case the disease should make its appearance the animals should be at once killed and buried and all everything on the premises that was exposed, should be burned, and cattle liable to be infected should be properly quarantined. Should the disease break out here, a veterinary surgeon appointed to appraise the property, pay a fair value for it, and require the owner to disinfect his premises. I have no doubt the legislature would provide for the reimbursement of counties that adopt such measures to stamp out the disease. Many surgeons throughout the country are sending remedies they want to be sent to try to cure the disease. The governor and several other parties will leave for the diseased districts on a special train to-morrow.

Letter from Dr. Serre.
18 West 25th Street,
New York, June 1, 1883.
I have been a sufferer in the past with Malaria, which finally became Chills and Fever. Treatment by my physician failed to help me. I used BRANDLET'S PILLS and was cured. Thirteen months have elapsed since then, and I have had no recurrence. Other members of my family used them for the same trouble, with the same good result.

I cheerfully endorse them for that illness, and also as a pleasant laxative or purgative, according to the numbers taken.
They are now a household remedy with me, and I am never without them. I would gladly give the details of the foregoing to any who might choose to call upon me for them.

J. E. SERRE, Dentist.

The Cattle Plague.

TOPEKA, Kas., March 10.—Governor Glick, in reply to the resolution adopted at the meeting of the Oaage county stockmen, held last week, says: "I do not think the public would justify the calling of the legislature together. It

A Case Not Beyond Help.

Dr. M. H. Hinckley, Kenosha, Ill., advises us of a remarkable cure of consumption.
He says: "A neighbor's wife was afflicted with violent lung disease, and pronounced beyond help from Quack Consumption. As a last resource she was persuaded to try Dr. Wm.
HALL'S 'GOLDEN CURE FOR THE LUNGS.' To the astonishment of all, by the time she had used one half dozen bottles she was about the house doing her own work. I was her worst and had no idea she could recover."

Watson's Neuralgia King.

This is one of the best remedies for Neuralgia ever invented. It is not a liniment, but a medicine to be taken internally, and cures by going right to the root of the disease.
A lady who tried many other things, without result, tried Neuralgia King, and was immediately cured. We guarantee it in all cases when used according to directions.

WHITE ELEPHANT TALK.

Circus Agents on Their Mettle.

Philadelphia Times.
"Has Forepaugh a white elephant?" said the gentlemanly Ananias of the Barnum show, repeating the reporter's question, and scornfully adding: "Why don't you ask me if John O'Brien has one!"

"Has he?"
"Who? John O'Brien? Why, great Egypt, no—unless he has whitewashed his old African elephant. You're twenty-one, ain't you? Well, don't let any of those Forepaugh guys close your eye on this subject, I'm telling you straight when I say Barnum is the only showman that has a white elephant. Of course he's white," continued the agent, referring to the pacher—"that is, as white as a sacred elephant goes. I don't know any white as snow, but he's white in patches. A sort of a calico elephant, so to speak. You've seen a calico horse?"

"Yes."
"Well, just try and picture to yourself an elephant that looks like that." While the reporter was endeavoring to draw a mind-picture of a bay elephant, decorated with pink and white patches, the awful truthfulness of Mr. Forepaugh's emissaries flashed through the brain of Mr. Barnum's agent, and, with a frown on his face, he inquired: "Now, you don't for a moment believe that his biscuits"—by that remarkable title he meant Mr. Forepaugh—"up Chestnut street could buy a white elephant? No, of course you don't know. That's just the point. He knows you don't, and so he sends guys around to swell your head."

NEXT BEST THING.
"When he heard that Mr. Barnum had a white elephant his Philadelphia biscuit says if I can't get one I'll make 'em think I have. I tell you it takes big money to get a sacred elephant; and what's more, there was only one for sale, and as soon as Mr. Barnum heard of it he at once dispatched twelve agents to Burmah. They were eight years ago. The agents labored seven years and spent $137,000, but were unable to secure the prize. Not wishing to return empty-handed they, in 1882, bought an elephant with white feet, a white trunk and a white tail, but it was not sacred. The brute was shipped to this country, but when Mr. Barnum learned that it was not pure white he sent the sacred one Mr. Baily and Mr. Hutchinson. 'I will never consent to deceive the people of my native country by palming off on them a curiosity that is not genuine.' That's the governor's style, you know—straight up and down as a center pole."

Here the agent broke his narrative, and holding up two fingers of his right hand said to the bar keeper: "Why, right now, I'm waiting for my companion to say: 'The governor won't have a drink in man with the show; and the instant he hears that one of his employes has taken a drink, off goes the drinker's head.
I'm taking big chances when I order sours in a public place like this. Then returning in he said: 'Say old man, don't you believe that any one except Mr. Barnum could exhibit a white elephant in this country next summer. Oh, yes—that spurious white elephant. Well, Hutch and Baily, they said: 'What will we do with it?' and the governor, he said: 'Kill it and get one that is genuine or none at all.' So it was poisoned."

LEASED FOR A FABULOUS SUM.
"Another force of agents went to Burmah with $30,000 worth of presents (costing at least $5,000) for the king and at last succeeded in securing at Doang Dance the largest, whitest and most intelligent sacred elephant in the world, and, mind you, it is the only one that exhibits the calico. It cost $200,000, and its golden bath tub and feeding trough cost $75,000 more, and, by the way, the trappings were only leased at that. The priests that wait upon the elephant are paid $5,000 a month. Millions of natives gathered on the Salween to see the lord of white elephants leave home.

What do you think of Mr. Barnum, do you say? Why, they worship him. Old Swan, who was over there tells me they have images of the governor in all the temples now. There's the bill of sale of our elephant published in The Rangoon Gazette," he added, unfolding a dirty-looking little newspaper and pointing out a column article on "Young Elephant," the spotted proboscidean that Mr. Barnum is now exhibiting in England.

THE OTHER PICTURE.
An hour or so later the reporter met one of the picturesque story-tellers employed to do part of the Burmah business for Mr. Forepaugh's aggregation.

"Look at that!" he said, holding up this cablegram:
"White elephant will reach Philadelphia in April. Expert naturalists say he is the only pure Albino elephant in the world. All others are leopards.

"That knocks Barnum higher than a kitten," said the agent, gleefully.
"I tell you the Main Guy—(Mr. Forepaugh's agent, in referring to their employer, frequently give him that unique title)—"has the only white elephant that ever left the east. What! Call that measly little beast of Barnum's, with a few dirty gray patches on his trunk, white? Why, it's both, and when it comes down to the sacred business we have at the best of it. On the quiet, I'll tell you that that really elephant of Barnum's was never called sacred by any one except circus agents, while the Main Guy's white monarch lived for twenty years in a temple and was worshipped by millions upon millions of people. When it became known that he was to leave his native land the natives bought single hairs from his body for a rupee apiece. The priests who have charge of him made about $12,000 selling hairs. That little elephant in London cost about $10,000, while ours cost $250,000 before he left his temple, and his diamond-studded trappings cost $75,000. Now, I am giving you facts." Then there was a long pause.

SCIENCE TO THE RESCUE.
"O, you saw one of those chumps of the Barnum show, did you? Filled you up, didn't he? I hope he told you all the hearting of Professor Doremus, of New York, did he? Didn't he try to turn an ordinary elephant white. He didn't, eh? Yes, it's true, Old Doremus went down there and doped and painted and fooled with a black elephant and just when the operators thought the beast was becoming a shade paler it died. Ask some of those jays about it; but say, don't you let 'em pull your leg and convince you that that sick elephant they got in Burmah is white or sacred, for it isn't.
Just bear in mind all the time you're talkin' to them guys that Mr. Forepaugh has the only legitimate white elephant, and we've got the documents to prove it."

The conversation was interrupted by Mr. Cox, one of the imaginative agents of John B. Doris' show. "Say, fellows," began Mr. Cox, "did you hear about Doris?"

"No."

"He's just bought a sacred white elephant. The only legitimate one that will be exhibited in America this year," declared Mr. Doris' representative, unblushingly. The agents looked horns at once on the white elephant question and the reporter fled.

A SOMNAMBULIST'S BREAK.

The Result of Talking About Murders and Murderers.
Cincinnati Enquirer.

On Thursday night the family of Mr.
M. Vandervoort, of the firm of Marcell Vandervoort & Co., had quite an exciting event at their residence, near the Presbyterian church in Loveland. A lady visitor and relative of the family arose in her sleep, jumped from her bed-chamber window, and was found walking down the Cincinnati, Washington and Baltimore railroad track. The lady is a widow and highly respected, and has never had any similar experience before, although she has reached nearly the age of 80. She feels considerably embarrassed at her froze, and at her urgent request her name is withheld. The family had several young people as callers during the evening, and considerable conversation concerning the many recent murders was indulged in. About 11 o'clock the callers left for home, and the family retired.
The lady who was the central figure in the after excitement occupied a chamber having a window opening out onto the veranda.

About midnight some of the family were awakened by voices of men and the wailing of a female voice. Mr. Court Vandervoort, the eldest son, appeared at the window, revolver in hand, and saw two men and a woman in the street.
When they caught sight of the weapon they retreated, making some remark about one of the murderers. Nothing further was heard, and the supposition being that the parties were some belated inebriates, the family again went to sleep.
In about half an hour the son was again awakened, and found a young army about the house. Alarmed at the strange sight, he ran down stairs revolver in hand, and found some of the parties trying to force open the dining-room door, while at the same time the front door-bell was violently ringing. The son ran from one door to another, determined to keep the murderous robbers out. Up to this time not a word had been spoken. Mr. Vandervoort, alarmed, and inquired what was up. A voice from outside answered that the family were murdered, and a woman had jumped from the upper window. Mr. Vandervoort immediately imagined a foul scheme.
Opening the door he found a crowd, headed by Officer Martin. Mr. Vandervoort informed them that his family were all alive and well, and used some violent language against the intruders, at the same time inquiring where the woman was. He was escorted to the residence of Col. Nash, and there found his guest, who was supposed to be found asleep, and the family using caution to prevent her rest being broken by the noise. Explanations were in order, and were given as follows: The crew of an eastern-bound freight on the Cincinnati, Washington and Baltimore railroad were taking water and receiving orders when they saw a white object coming down the track toward them. As it drew nearer they discovered a woman in her night-dress and barefooted walking over the frozen ground, through the freezing wind.
They asked her what was the matter.
She said, the Vandervoort family were all murdered, and she had escaped by jumping from the window. When asked where the house was, she led them toward the Vandervoort residence, making strange and pitiful noises all the time. As they near the house they saw young Vandervoort at the window, and mistook him for one of the murderers. Alarmed, they fled, and after taking the lady to Col.
Nash's home they raised a crowd, including Officer Martin, and proceeded again to the house, determined to capture the murderer, and with the results already stated.

The lady has no recollection of anything that occurred until Mr. Vandervoort spoke to her at Col. Nash's. Up to that time she had believed that the family were all murdered. When awakened she again went to bed, and yesterday did not seem to be suffering from any very bad results of her remarkable night's experience.
Although weighing over 200 pounds she escaped without a visible injury or scratch.

Mysterious Testimony as to Fitz John Porter.
BOSTON, March 10.—The Herald says in an article on the Fitz John Porter case: "Evidence of an important character bearing on the disputed dispatches of August 29th has been discovered and that much-verified and most prominent dispatch bearer at the battle of Bull Run who conveyed important orders from General Pope to General Porter, has been discovered." The article claims that through the instrumentality of Logan now evidence which, it is claimed, will throw much light upon the question of Porter's guilt or innocence, has been obtained. Logan will present the new evidence when the bill is called up in the senate.

Ladies should reflect well before using an preparation that is applied to so delicate a surface as the skin. Any cosmetic will at first impart a beautiful effect, and not apparently injure the skin, but in a very short time little blotches and discolorations appear on the face which conclusively show the poisonous drugs in their composition. It can be safely said that more than two-thirds of the face powders contain these injurious ingredients. Foster's medicinal complexion powder is not only absolutely free from all deleterious matter, but its principal ingredient is an active curative for all diseases of the skin. It has stood the test of years. Sold by all

Heavy Snow in Minnesota and Da-

CHICAGO, March 11.—A severe wind

The snow is drifting badly in places, delaying trains, and in one or two instances causing freight trains to be abandoned.
