The experience in the treatment of Cancer with Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) would seem to warrant us in saying that it will cure this muon dreaded scourge. Persons afflicted are invited to orrespond with us. I believe Swift's S ceift has saved my life. I had virtually lost the use of the upper part of my body and my arms from the poisonous effects of a large cancer on my neck, from which I had sufferd for 20 years. S. S. S has relieved me of all soreness, and the poison is being forced out of my system. I will soon be well.

Case, a three millionaire, and the meek-looking pony was the famous Jay-Eye See, the fastest trotter of his age in the world, and whose record of 2:103 is within half a second of the best ever made. FARMOUS TROTTERS. In this country when a trotter makes a "best on record" at any age or way of going he at once becomes famous and his name a household word. Nearly a quarter of a century ago when the little bob-tailed bay mare Fiora Temple inaugurated a new era in turf lore by trotting in 2:19} over the Kalamazoo, Mich., track the cry went up that the report could not be true-the course must have been short or the time incorrectly announced. But the track was a full mile, and people accepted the performance, contenting themselves with saying it would never be equaled. For a few years it looked as though these confident predictions would prove true, but one day in the fall of 1865 Mr. George B. Alley, a New York stock broker who one would want to look at, a clean-cut, ruff had placed him when the horse chang-ter was retired Doble took Goldsmith Maid, a nervous, flighty little mare, a W. R. Griffith to Austin Hake, set Dexter, and it was not long until he had being his pillow, and at daybreak the old Dexter, and it was not long until he had being his pillow, and at daybreak the old Dexter, and it was not long until he had being his pillow, and at daybreak the old Dexter, and it was not long until he had being his pillow, and at daybreak the old Dexter, and it was not long until he had being his pillow, and at daybreak the old Dexter, and it was not long until he had being his pillow, and at daybreak the old Dexter, and it was not long until he had being his pillow, and at daybreak the old Dexter, and it was not long until he had being his pillow, and at daybreak the old Dexter, and it was not long until he had being his pillow, and at daybreak the old being his pillow. beaten Dexter's time with her, and year by year she kept lowering the record until 2:14 was reached, and these figures with his horses is that they shall be stood unchanged until Rarus, a horse of unknown breeding on his sire's side, trot-whom he paid $27,590, would follow him ted at Buffalo in 1878 in 2:13‡. The following year his time was beaten half a second by St. Julien, a grandson of Hambeltonian, in California, and hardly had St. Julien assumed the crown when Maud S, another Hambeltonian, came out and in 1880 trotted the Chicago track in 2:103 and the following season she lowered the record to 2:104, where it now stands, she being then 7 year old. It is Besides Jay-Eye-See and Phallas there for these reasons that a horse that trots are in the barn adjoining Mr. Case's rein 2:11 or better at once becomes fam- sidence a number of other equine notous, and when, as in the case of Jay-Eye- ables. Gurgle, a stoutly-built young See, the feat is accomplished when the animal is but 5 years of age, there is all in 2:13 over the Chicago track last year, the more excitement and comment, be- attracted Mr. Case's attention by the percause trotters are certain, with proper formance, and he bought her for $6,000 care to increase in speed from year to and turned her loose in the meadows at year until at least a dozen seasons have Hickory Grove farm. She is to be trained yet in his baby-hood. THE OWNER, And the fame of the horse is shared by his owner. People want to see and know about the man who possesses the fastest horse to a much greater extent than they do the owner of a fine picture gallery or the author of a successful book. Mr. Case, who bought Jay-Eye-See before the colt had ever felt harness, has been a lover of trotters all his life, and for many years an owner and breeder of good ones. He bought Gov. Sprague, the fastest stallion of his day, for $27,500, and Mila C., when that mare was thought highly of paying $6,500 for her. He paid $6,000 for Western, a speedy animal that fell and broke his neck while being loaded on a car for shipment, and many others of note in the west have belonged to him. But it was not until Jay-Eye-See began cutting down the record that people in sections remote from here began to learn about his owner. When the little black pony trotted in 2:19 as a 4 year-old, lowering the record for horses of that age three-quarters of a second, eastern people began inquiring who J. I. Case was, and when last season his namesake mowed down everything in the shape of horseflesh that dared oppose him, and finally capped his succession of triumphs by a victory over St. Julien, which was witnessed by 20,000 people, the papers were full of news concerning the pony and hafter pay fare unless I get a seat. I know what the law is. Yer dasen't put—" Just then there was a slight scuffing noise, and as the car moved on the man of law crawled out of the mire, and, removing a mouthful of mud, added, is meaniful to the kind in the world. The facts are that the fall I became his owner I stopped in Chicago on my way to Kentucky and met George Brasfield, who had been superintendent at Col. West's farm near Lexington. I asked him to tell me about the best young stock, in his estimation, that Col. West had—to write down the names and breeding of each animal for me, placing them in what he considered the order of merit. He did so, and the very first entry was: 'Black colt by Dictator, out of Mid-night.' KINDNESS AND CARE FOR TROTTERS. Jay Eye-See and his companions travel in a car built especially for their accom-modation and fitted up with every convenience that experience can suggest There is a roomy stall for each horse, the car being designed for seven animals, places where the men who attend them sleep, and ingenious arrangements of space for the stowage of sulkies, harness, etc. "I don't think anything too good for my horses," said Mr. Case, and his affection for them is manifested in other ways. For twelve successive weeks a high-class trotter is expected to keep in form and be ready for a good race every seven days. That he may be able to do this the utmost care must be given him. A square stall, as large as a bedroom, furnishes him ample space to move about when not otherwise engaged during the day, and at night he lies down on a thick bed of the cleanest straw that money can buy. A capable groom looks after his every want. At 5 or 6 o'clock in the morning the trotter is given a light breakfast and taken out for exercise and speeding. This over, he is carefully rubbed with cloths until every hair made wet by perspiration is dry again and his coat shines like satin. Wet bandages are placed on his legs to allay any inflammation that might be saused by the violent exercise to which he has been subjected, and a light sheet keeps the flies from annoying him. the late hours of the afternoon he is taken out and walked without harness for about an hour, and then fed and disposed of for the night. On the day that he is to trot a-race the quantity of food and water is limited, in order that his atomach may not be overloaded when the battle of speed begins. After a heat has been trotted he is taken in charge by three or four groems, who rub him thoroughly, sponge out his mouth with the cool water that cannot with safety be given to him in a larger quantity, handage his lived
