the one most widely diffused, is the use of Pasch (Easter) Eggs. They are usually stained of various colors with dye-woods and herbs, and people mutually make pres-ents of them; sometimes they are kept as amulets, sometimes caten; games are also and herbs, and people mutually make pres-ents of them; sometimes they are kept as amulets, sometimes eaten; games are also played by striking them against one anoth-er. In some moorland parts of Scotland it used to be the custom for young people to go out early on "Pasch Sunday" and search for wild fowls' eggs for breakfast, and it was thought lucky to find them. There has be little doubt that the use of eggs at this season was originally symbolical of the revivification of nature—the springing forth of life in the Spring. The practice is not confined to Christians; the Jews used eggs in the feast of the Passover, and we are told that the Persians, when they keep the festival of the solar new year (in March), mutually present each other with colored eggs.
