Officer Ruane, while on Twelfth street near Capitol avenue at about 1:30 this norning, was startled by the cry of fire. He ran to Sixteenth street and pulled the box and then returned to look for the fire, which by that time could be easily found, It proved to be in the barn of George liacomini, who lives on the corner of Cass and Fifteenth. By the time the department arrived the building was in flames, which had spread to an adjoining barn. Both buildings were entirely destroyed, and their contents, of little or no value, were also lost. The buildings were worth between $1,000 and $1,500, with no insurance How the fire originated is not known Some suppose it to have been the act of a tramp, while others say a boutire had been burning in the alley near the barn all day, and is the probable cause of the barns being burned.
