social as well as a spiritual power. The church that is spiritual and not social may do a great deal of good; the church that is social and not spiritual can never accomplish its work; but the church that is both spiritual and social will never lack of success in any community or in any place where it may be found.

People say, "Well, if I associate with them and make them my equal, I may compromise my social standing." If your social standing is so easily compromised, it is not worth having. You are to be pitied if you have no more social stability in yourself than that which will enable you to afford to reach out the hand of fellowship to the humblest person.

Let us be busy in our work for God's church that the prayer of our hearts and the desire of our minds may be realized, in beholding us a thousand times as many more as we are, and that we may be bleased as has been promised.
