

THE LINCOLN TRAGEDY.

A Woman's Dishonor Leads to a Double Murder.

Husband and Paramour Both Die From Bullet Wounds--The Cause of the Tragedy a Former Resident of Omaha.

The Lincoln tragedy, which occurred on Monday, has resulted in the death of both of its victims, Long having died on Tuesday. The particulars of the affair are of considerable interest to residents of Omaha, as the woman in the case is well-known in this city, having resided here for some time. She was the wife of a well-known railroad man, and had many acquaintances about town. The Lincoln News furnishes the following account of the tragedy:

Monday night a little before 12 o'clock, a continuous cracking of revolvers, the screams of a woman and the cries of a wounded man, aroused the residents around the corner of Eighth and R streets, and disclosed the fact that some terrible tragedy was being enacted. Those who first reached the scene found Lew Johnson, a freight conductor on the B. & M. road, who lives in the house on that corner, lying on the walk in front of his house crying out with mortal pain while his wife in her night clothes was rushing about as if dazed.

The inquiry as to who came, the woman said that she had shot her husband and also Ed Long, a roomer in the house. She had a revolver in her hand and threatened to shoot some of those who came about, until they felt it safer to withdraw.

Mr. Stubbfield, the owner of the house, lives in a part of the large double house, ran out, and finding his neighbor Smith, the bartender, just coming home, he jumped in and was driven down for the police. They were found, and two taken into the hack and carried back, while the third went after medical help. When they got there quite a number of neighbors, alarmed by the racket, had gathered. Johnson was still lying on the walk, but some of his hands got a pillow, and put under his head and a comfortable over him.

Up stairs in a bedroom on the floor lay Ed Long pierced with two bullets and from the gaping wounds his life blood was gushing out. Mr. Stubbfield was the first to find him, and to his inquiries, Long said that Lew Johnson had shot him, and that he had shot Johnson. He further said that he thought he was going to die, and he hoped he had killed Johnson.

By the time Drs. Lane and Hart came Johnson was so far gone that nothing could be done for him, and he died in half an hour from the time he was shot. The doctors at once turned their attention to Long who still lay upon the floor until they came. He had no other wounds, and a pair of drawers. He was laid upon the bed in the room, and an examination made which showed a bullet hole in the small of the back just beside the spine, and another in the right side close up to the armpit in front. The body was completely paralyzed from the first wound down, and the doctors could give but little hope for life. They pushed but did not find it.

The facts in regard to this terrible affair seem to be about as follows: Johnson and wife had occupied the residence corner of 8th and R streets for some months, renting some of the rooms to lodgers. Among these was Ed Long, a switchman in the B. & M. yards, who had a room on the second floor and took his meals at Mr. Stubbfield's. The neighbors have known for some time that there was trouble between Johnson and his wife, and for a couple of weeks he has not come about the house, so that a rumor was current that he had left her. Her partiality for Long was said to be the cause, and his infatuation for her was so manifest that it was making some, and Mr. Stubbfield had not felt him last Saturday that he must get his meals elsewhere. From the appearance it seems that Johnson, whose train was in and was to go out at 12 o'clock last night, had found Long in the room with Mrs. Johnson. Both were in their night clothes. As Johnson forced his way into the room, Long ran out and up stairs. From the fact that Johnson's first bullet struck him as he was on the stairs, he went into the room, locked the door and got his revolver. Johnson followed him up, and with at least two vigorous kicks burst the catch of the door and threw it open. As they stood there several shots were exchanged, one striking Long in the side, while the other from his revolver struck Johnson in the right side, not far from the nipple, and ranged down past the heart through the body. This was the only wound he received. He ran down and out to the sidewalk where he fell. He was conscious almost to the last, and related what he had done. Wait Montgomery, hind brakeman on his train, who is the first to reach him. To him Johnson said, "I found Long in bed with my wife, just as I expected, and shot him."

To those who came first, Mrs. Johnson said she had shot both men, but she soon retracted this. She had evidently been drinking, and was under the influence of liquor at the time. The police took charge of her as well as the premises, and remained all night. The body of Johnson was removed to Undertaker Heaton's rooms to be prepared for burial, and await the coroner's inquest.

Mrs. Johnson is somewhat known in the city. She is an expert skater and a frequenter of the rinks. At the Metropolitan rink, Saturday night, she took the big cake offered as a prize for the best lady skater. Before her marriage to Johnson she had been divorced from another husband on Kearney. She had the reputation of being somewhat fast, but was not supposed to be as bad as she proves.

Johnson was formerly sheriff of Buffalo county, and was known to be a man of nerve. On one occasion he subdued a rebellious prisoner by shooting him through the ear. He was a large, fine looking man, about 32 years of age, and had been conductor on the road for two or three years. Long is a small, wiry young fellow with plenty of nerve, and was generally popular among his associates. He seldom drank and was esteemed as a fine young fellow. During the last few weeks he has been drinking a good deal, however, and his infatuation for the woman has utterly demoralized him.

that time. When the workmen's procession marched down Farnam street, the martial music stirred Johnson's fighting qualities and he at once determined to protect the property of his employers at all hazards. Mounting the hurricane deck of the steam shovel he calmly gripped his revolver to receive the oncoming host of brawny breadwinners. He did not quail when sticks and bricks carved the air above and around him and while cautiously feeling for a victim, a well-directed "billy" caught him in the back of the neck, and he tumbled from his lofty perch. As soon as he struck the ground the boom of his pantaloons was filled with flying boots and other villainous missiles. The struggle was a brief but lively one, and Johnson stood up to his meals for a week after.

POLICE POINTS.

Wedding Out Suspicious Characters--An Old Man Fleeced.

The first person to appear before Judge Stenberg yesterday morning was the man named J. E. Price, who was arrested by the police Tuesday evening as a suspicious character. The charge preferred was vagrancy, and considerable time was spent by the court in endeavoring to ascertain the man's antecedents. His stories did not seem to hang together well, and he contradicted himself several times on being questioned. He registered at Slaven's hotel under the name of N. Biye, but could give no reason for so doing.

The next cases were those of James Smith, Constance Ford, George Emerson and Frank Hills. All pleaded guilty to intoxication, and were fined $5 and costs, which they will work out. When caught, Ford, who is an Italian, was crazy drunk, and had a long dirk concealed about his person.

Dave Hurst was a finely-dressed man to appear on a charge of vagrancy, but he was apprehended under the statute which defines attendants and inmates of gambling houses to be vagrants. Dave lives at the Bluffs, and is a gambler by profession. He visits Omaha quite frequently, but never seems to have any business, and puts in his time hanging around the streets. His actions have been of a suspicious nature, and Judge Stenberg concluded that he was not needed around Omaha. He therefore sentenced him to sixty days in the county jail and to pay the costs. Sentence was suspended, however, until 11 o'clock, and it will be wise for Hurst to show his head in the city for some time to come.

Peter Green, colored, was also up on the same charge. He is the husband of the notorious Della Green, and it has been hinted that he had something to do with her crooked actions. Peter, however, claimed to be straight, and the judge discharged him with a long lecture and numerous warnings to beware how he carried himself in the future.

Thomas Boyd is a young man, and he was accused by a white-haired old singer named John Leslie of having made away with his cash. Leslie, who lives at Plattsmouth, came up Tuesday with the accusation, and immediately proceeded to get a warrant for the man. He then wanted to "take in the town," and fell in the evening, at some place, he fell in with Boyd, who proceeded to show him around. After taking numerous glasses of beer, the happy couple entered a house kept by a woman named Mitchell. Here the old man became infatuated with a charming creature and gave her a twenty dollar gold piece to be changed. While the girl was gone after the change the old man claims that he was hurried from the house by the man Boyd and not allowed to return. Boyd denied taking the old man's money, but owned up to taking him to the place kept by the Mitchell woman. On this evidence Judge Stenberg sentenced Boyd to be imprisoned in the county jail for forty days, the last ten of them on bread and water. This sentence was also under the statute providing that employees of houses of prostitution are to be classed as vagrants, with no visible means of support.

Maud P. Loves to be Petted.

Maud S. is altogether different from any of the rest of the record-breakers. Flora Temple had a temper of her own. Dexter was even vicious at times, and Goldsmith had frequently chased Duke's mother from her box. Maud, on the other hand, must be petted. Billy Black, her trainer and driver, said yesterday that the crowds who came to see her were her delight. She must have company, and the only signs of pettishness she shows is when she is not admired. Yesterday lady's petted and caressed her, and children stroked the legs of the sufferer that has gotten over her 1,700 yards faster than any other in her kind in the world. She seemed pleased, and when the box door was opened would peek up her ears and gaze to see who was coming in.
