It is a welcome call in the morning just before breakfast, that sent out of Washington the vile but along toward midnight a policeman's falsehood that the president and his sizbut along toward midnight a policeman's whistle sounds better. As much as we like strawberries and are fooled in the eating capacity of "them boxes four for a quarter," there are times in the lone hour of night when we would rather be seran-aded by the friendly tones of a police-man's whistle—to be assured that a helping hand is ready if need be. And our Washington policemen are such handsome, gentle fellows. While they are always willing to be kind and accom-modating in hours of trouble, they mind their own business better than any other class of officials in Washington! The de-tective business was a little overdone tective business was a little overdone about a year ago, but our policemen, bless them, nothing to fear from them. By the way, speaking of midnight scren-ades and sweet sounds reminds me of
