A Grateful People Tenderly Remembers Them.

Music, Flowers and Oratory.

Decoration day was more generally oberved here this year than ever before. The many sentiments which gave birth as elsewhere, rather than weaken. The day was a bright, pleasant one, and from the early hours of the morning the streets were crowded with people, business being generally suspended, and many strangers from other places arriving on every train.

The exercises and services took place in the afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. The procession formed and marched up Broadway to the Ogden house, and thence up Oakland avenue to Fairview cemetery.

Abe Lincoln post Grand Army of the Republic turned out in full force, and hese survivors of the scenes of over twenty years ago, their ranks each year becoming thinner and their steps less firm, object of interest. Each veteran bore a formerly general agent of the Wabash here. large floral wreath, to be offered as a tribute to those who had been mustered out before. The younger generations were well represented, there being a large number of school children and pupils of the institution for the deaf and formerly one of the proprietors of the Revere

The Danebo society with an excellent Wheeler, band made a fine appearance. There were also a large delegation of the ancient order of Hibernians, the Catholic Knights, and the ancient order of Druids. The city officials, the fire department and citizens in carriages helped swell the procession. The fire depart-ment in uniform, and the apparatus decorated with flowers, flags and other adornments presented a very attractive appearance. The cemetery itself was a perfect garden of flowers. The services opened at the grand stand, around which gathered Sateens 8 to worth 15c.

M. Phillips served as president. Gen.
Josiah Given of Des Moines, was the orator of the day and his oration was a grand one. In opening he drew the dis-tinction between this and other days observed by the American people. He said he could not recall in all history wherein death had been by custom publicly commemorated except one, the Lord's supper. History might tell the causes and success of the war, but the stones of the noble dead should not be trusted to history alone. These gatherings were to keep alive the feeling of gratitude, and to cherish sacred memcries. The speaker vividly pictured scenes and incidents of the camp and field, and the mention of the name of forth enthusiastic applause. In speaking of the relations to their old enemy

"What are they to-day? I think the subject had fit expression in the resolution passed in the last encampment of the grand army of the republic of Iowa. In substance this: The old enemy divides themselves into two classes; that class who declared war against the gov- at Hampton. ernment, met us and fought us according to the laws of war, and having been defeated accept their defeat as decisive against the right of secession for which they fought, and are to day loyal to the old flag and union. Comrades, there are thousands of such, and we consider them welcome to all the privileges and protections of the government that we as citizens ask for ourselves, and we bid them welcome to an equal chance with ourselves in the struggles and contests of life. Welcome as a citizen, but when before the government demanding the rights due us as soldiers, they cannot court. stand beside us."

and this address was frequently broken a stallion last week. into by applause.

The decorating of the graves followed, and among the special features were the services at the resting place of Prof. G. S. Massey, formerly principal of the Washington avenue school in this city. His grave is marked by a marble monu-ment placed there by the teachers of the public schools, as a special tribute for the day. There was placed at the foot of the and Thursday, Sep ember 23 and 24. grave a cross wrapped in the national colors, and resting on a base formed of three terraces of natural flowers. On the upright of the cross hung floral wreath, and a basket white flowers, the border of red, and the letters "At Rest" in blue. Those connected with the public schools joined in this special remembrance of Prof. Massey. Mr. Spencer Smith gave an address, in which he outlined the life and virtues of of Massachusetts, and enlisted as a pri-vate in the Seventh Pennsylvania volurteers. He was for four months a prisoner in Libby, and there contracted a disease which ultimately caused his death. At the close or the war he removed to this city and taught in the public schools here. He died in 1880. Prof. McNaughton offered a touching tribute to those in unknown graves, his address being one of the best of the day. He was followed by Col. Sapp, whose address closed the exercises. The Fuller post, of Logan, the Woodbine post and Malvern post were represented on the day by large delegations. Dr. McKune's grave was very beautifully decorated, among the tributes being a pullow, with the stars and stripes worked upon it in flowers.

The grave of Henry Cunningham, the soldier printer, was handsomely deco-rated, among the offerings being a fine wreath sent by the old type, Ben Allen, from Favetteville, Arkansas.
