price last night was 119. This morning it opened at 116 and hung between 116 and 117 us to 2 o'clock, the trading up to noon being 2,780 shares, which is considered good busi ness for quiet stock. The general list was sold freely by the bears during the morning, and declines of % to % points were recorded, the latter being on Manhattan. The bear leaders took advantage of the free outpouring of stocks to cover, but tailers oversold themselves and in their efforts to get their stocks back bid them up with more rapidity than they had previously sold them. All early declines were recovered and fair advances established. The market gained strength the last hour. Burlington advanced 34 and closed 11734. Closing prices on the rest of the active list were at about the outside figures of the day, and the recorded gains of about 14@1 point over yesterday's reaction were only natural after the recent break. The total sales were 336,000 shares. GOVERNMENTS .- Government bonds were

OMAHA LIVE STOCK.

Cattle. Wednesday, May 9, 1888. There was a heavy increase in the receipts of cattle to-day, one hundred fresh loads being on sale. The market was fairly active and a large number of cattle were sold. The prices paid were about steady with yester day.

Hogs. The hog market was active with liberal receipts. It was a strong market and in some cases, considering the quality, 5: higher. One load reached $5.55 the top for some time back. The hogs were all sold early.

Sheep. There were no sheep here to make a mar-

Improvements for South Omaha. There have been few, if any, more imortant meetings held in South-Omaha than the one that met in the Exchange hotel par lors Tuesday afternoon. Those present were few in number, but they represented all the important interests of the city. P. E. Her was there on behalf of the South Omaha Land syndicate, John Boyd for the Stockyards company, Councilmen Smith, Bayliss, McMillan and Rafferty for the city and Messrs. Persons, Hunt, Howland, Cockerell, Anderson and Erion for the board of trade The meeting was not a formal one, but one in which the best interests of South Omaha were represented, and in which routine business was supplanted by an informal talk in which all present became better acquainted which all present became better acquainted, and many little differences were amicably explained. Hen, W. A. Paxton would have been there only that he was prevented by illness, and Mr. Her as far as possible took his place. It is safe to say that the policy of the Stackyards Co. and of the land syndicate, was never so thoroughly understood as at the meeting, and that it was never before so thoroughly understood that the best interests of South Omaha are identical with the best interests of those companies. The grading of Twenty-fourth street was first considered and Mr. Her explained that his company had agreed to expend $2,000 for that purpose, with the understanding that the work would be done within the limits of South Omaha. The agreement had been partly written and partly verbal, but the company had expended the necessary $2,000 It remained for the county commissioners to complete it, and he had no doubt but that they would. The grade had never been offi-cially established, but it was intended to be of full width—100 feet. The main object of the Land company was to secure a road through to Omaha, and the quickest and most direct way was along Twenty-fourth street to Vinton and up Vinton to Six-teenth. They had secured the services of an attorney to find out if the county com-missioners could legally do any paving or grading along the route within the city grading along the route within the city limits. He thought, however, that South Omaha should provide for sewers, water and gas before doing any paving.

When the question of viaducts came up he said that the two proposed would cost about $70,000 or $80,000 apiece, and in the present state of the city's finances he thought the one at L street would answer all purposes for the present and he of ware practical benefit the present and be of more practical benefit to the city. It would connect with Omaha by way of Twenty-fourth street, and furnish a good roadway for Armour & Co. and any other packers who wanted to supply the re-tail markets. He thought the city could not stand the expense of both viaduets, and that if in order to do it they made a high assessment or an excessive levy, they would only drive from the town the manufacturers that other cities are trying to attract. The land company was willing to construct the L street viaduct at their own expense providing the one at Q street was not built on the proceeds of bonds issued. If bonds were to be issued, they should be issued for both, and in any case the land company and the stock yards company would bear the greatest share of the cost, as they were the heaviest taxpayers. The companies did not wish in any way to oppose the Q street via-duct, but wished it to be understood that they at all times wished to be hand and glove with those working for the interest of South Omaha. They were will to be very liberal. Further discussion ensued in which Councilmen Bayliss, Smith, Rafferty and McMillan, as well as the board of trade representatives, pointed out that the Q stree viaduct was a necessity, as nearly all railway facilities occurred there, and a man's life was worth more than the estimated cost. Finally, Mr. Iler said that if they wished to issue bonds to build the land company would not only offer no opposition, but he thought would cash nearly, if not all, the bonds issued. He, however, advised them to go slow, and not go into needless expense. Regarding sewerage, he thought the stockyards company would have no objection to N street being drained into their big sewer, and he would call a meeting of that company any time the city council desired. Before he left it was in a manner understood that the proposed improvements would include the two vinducts, the com-pletion of the grade on Twenty-fourth street, a sewer on N street, the paving of N street between Twenty-seventh and Twenty-fourth streets and a stone payement on Twentyseventh street between N and Q. Citizens will be called upon to vote for the necessary bonds, which will be made payable twenty years from daie, and only cost present property owners a slight annual tax.

mean time the money will be spent in South Omaha and the magic city will boom. This Year's Assessment. Within twenty-one days, or on June 1, the South Omaha assessors will be prepared to hand in their vualuations, and the result will be a surprise party to many. To some it may be an unpleasant surprise, but to the great majority it will show that some men at least can fearlessly do their duty. They have gone about it in the manner outlined in THE Bee, and as a result the assessment will be advanced from last year's figures of $590,000, to about $2,000,000 or $2,500,000, and this increase is not to be placed on the pack ing houses or manufacturers, as many supposed it would. They will have to bear : share, but the assessors have recognized the fact that some consideration is due them for having helped to build up the city, and by the employment of labor still helping to keep it where it is. It is after men who will have a lot assessed at $10, and then ask $500 for it, they are looking, and they have come across several. One lot was valued at $300 last year and this year it will show up at $3,500. There are many more such cases but it is only right to say that Assessor Kane, and his assistants R. J. Curtin and James Dougherty are trying to look after them all and perform their duty without fear or favor.

Notes About the City. O. Owenson, of Chapman, had two cars of cattle on the market. J. S. Umstead came in from Fullerton with a load of cattle. C. Rudat brought in three loads of Norfolk cattle and one load of hogs. J. T. Benedict was on the market with four loads of Hastings cattle.

The Exchange hotel guests yesterday were:
J. N. Welb, Bedford, Ia; Alex Segman,
Beatrice; F.J. Benedict, Hastings; H. Marsh, Elkhorn; G. W. Martin, Chicago; V. Allyn, Broken Bow; R. Bada, Silver City, and A. Stevers, Cedar Creek.

Already seventy citizens have applied for shares in the ball club association. Only 100 are required, and it can be safely said that South Omaha sporting men support home industry. Louis Slecher, of North Bend, is stopping at the City hotel. He came in with a load of Tom Kelly is on the market with two cars of cattle from Pleasant Valley. He has registered at the City hotel. Nine-tenths of Douglas county taxes are paid by Omaha and South Omaha, and yet the law won't let the commissioners grade a street to connect them. Pat Rice, jr., has not yet joined the force, as this is only his second day in the world. In the meantime he resides in South Omaha,
