Not a Candidate. OMAHA, Nov. 21.—To the Editor of THE BEE: About one week ago I announced myself as a democratic candidate for the office of city treasurer. Since that time I have been, and am now, confined to my bed through illness, and unable to make a canvass.

In view of the nominating convention being so close at hand, and in justice to my friends and myself, I considered it best to allow the further use of my name for that position.

My many friends have my sincere thanks for their kind efforts in my behalf. WILLIAM H. LEAMS.

A Dog's Long Fast. Not long since Doug Claypole of Webster county, West Virginia, and a friend went hunting, etc., taking with them a couple of hounds. It was not long till the hounds scented a fox and gave chase. They ran him till about 3 p. m., when he went to hole. One of the dogs returned the same day, the other was unheard from for more than a week. Hazel Sawyer, who lives near the place where the fox was holed, heard the suppressed barking of a dog for several days in succession. On going to the place Sawyer found the dog unable to free himself, having filled the lower part behind him as he dug after the fox, and being exhausted from the want of food and water. After clearing away the obstruction and given refreshment the dog was able to come forth from his dark and solitary hole, the fox being dead, having been confined there without food and water and not much air for nine days.

The Penalty of a Heifer's Curiosity. Farmer Lutz, of Montello, Pa., missed a young cow, and hunted all over the place for her for several days, but in vain. On the evening of the second day his son Billy went to the old smoke-house, and pulling up the latch noticed that the piece of old clothesline with which the door was usually fastened to the frame by means of staples for additional security, had been chewed in two. He thought this was queer, but a moment afterward, when he stepped over the threshold, the case was made clear to him. There on the floor of the smoke-house, moaning faintly in her compressed quarters, and weakened by the lack of food and water, lay the young heifer, suffering the punishment for her curiosity. She had got through two nights having first jumped over the barway fence, opened the farmyard gate with her mouth and forelegs, and then chewed the rope off that fastened the smoke-house door and lifted the latch.

Why Rochester Left England. The London correspondent of the Paris Herald says that Rochester has disappeared from London without leaving any trace of his whereabouts. The explanation of his departure is given in another paper as follows: "For some time past a pamphlet was being sold in the streets of London entitled 'Rochester on England, which reproduced the article published in the Intransigent against England and Queen Victoria. The pamphlet ended with a violent appeal for vengeance. The prosecution of Rochester was talked by the authorities, who were thinking of arresting him for insults to the queen, and, as the English don't take long to come to a decision in such matters, Rochester thought it prudent to follow the example of his skipper, Boulanger, and skip."

The Mexican's High-Prized Headgear. Mexico correspondence Philadelphia Record: When the men persist in wearing such extremely large hats it seems a little queer that the ladies wear no hats at all, and one can not but feel impressed with the idea that if they could be persuaded to "split the difference" and average up their head-gear fashions the result would be more comfortable for both sexes. The most ordinary sombrero costs not less than $15, while the more universally popular ones—those profusely garnished with bullion—range in price from $50 to $100. Of late years the exact strata of society cover their heads exactly as do gentlemen in London, Paris, or New York, but a genuine Mexican of the middle class still invests all his surplus capital in his hat. A serving man, whose wages are not more than $12 per month, patriotically puts a year's income into the expensive national sombrero. Though he economizes to purchase it, the matter of shoes, wearing ox-hide sandals of his own manufacture. An American gentleman tells me that, after being absent three months, he paid his footman $45 back wages, and gave him the following: he had invested $53 of it in a hat and devoted the remaining $7 to the wants of his numerous and needy family. While many a thoroughbred Mexican sports a sombrero whose value is many up in the hundreds, the ragged boy who blacks your boots is the proud possessor of one which cost him at least 150 "shinies."

"Harry" Clay's Body-Servant. William Alexander, an aged colored man employed about the state house, was found in his room yesterday morning, stricken with paralysis, says a Columbus, O., special. He has been a resident of Cincinnati for many years, and his relatives there were notified by telegraph. Mr. Alexander was quite a character, and always kept himself posted on the news of the day.

During the days of slavery he was on the plantation of Henry Clay, the great Kentucky statesman. When young Harry Clay went to Mexico at the head of a regiment, Alexander accompanied him as body servant, and he was near the young colonel when he was killed. Alexander used to relate many anecdotes of Henry Clay, and could repeat some of his speeches from memory. He used to say that "Mr. Clay never seemed to be himself after the death of young Harry."

Indigestion. IS not only a distressing complaint, of itself, but, by causing the blood to become depraved and the system enfeebled, is the parent of innumerable maladies. That Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best cure for indigestion, even when complicated with liver complaint, is proved by the following testimony from Mrs. Joseph Lake, of Brockway Centre, Mich.:

"Liver complaint and indigestion made my life a burden and came near ending my existence. For more than four years I suffered untold agony, was reduced almost to skeleton, and hardly had strength to drag myself about. All kinds of food distressed me, and only the most delicate could be digested at all. Within the time mentioned several physicians treated me without giving relief. Nothing that I took seemed to do any permanent good until I commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which has produced wonderful results. Soon after commencing to take the Sarsaparilla I could see an improvement in my condition. My appetite began to return, and with it came the ability to digest all the food taken, my strength improved each day, and after a few months of faithful attention to your directions, I found myself a well woman, able to attend to all household duties. The medicine has given me a new lease of life."

We invite all to attend these sales, which will be held daily for the next thirty days (if not disposed of before) and see if this statement is not a fact. MAX MEYER & BRO.
