

LARGEST FURNITURE HOUSE IN OMAHA

The People's Mammoth Installment House carries as Much Stock as All Installment Houses of Omaha Combined.

To-morrow, Monday morning, April 28th, the doors of the People's Mammoth Installment House, 613, 615, 617, 619 North 16th street, between California and Webster, will be thrown open, presenting the finest line of Furniture, Carpets, Stoves and Household Goods ever offered for inspection and sale in this city. The recent addition of the large adjoining building has been a boon to this well known establishment. Preparations had been made months ago for this improvement, in the way of large additional purchases, and these goods have been arriving all last week. Carloads of bright new goods were being constantly unloaded, and will be ready for sale to-morrow, at such prices as will astound the closest buyer. Buying goods for spot cash in large quantities, enables us to undersell any house in the city.

Call and be convinced. Our inducements are:

LOW PRICES, GOOD QUALITIES, AND EASY TERMS.

Everybody invited. No trouble to show goods. Open at night for the benefit of those unable to call during the day. Special inducements to parties starting housekeeping. Terms made to suit everybody.

WE ARE THE LEADERS AND WILL UNDERSSELL ALL.

THE LIFE OF UNCLE JOSHUA.

Genial Denman Thompson Tells How He Became an Actor.

"THE OLD FARMER OF SWANZY."

An Audience Votes on the Propriety of Stage Prayer—Sir Arthur Sullivan's Next Opera—A Visit to Mrs. Thurber.

Voted on the Stage Prayer.

A ballot was taken after the performance of Steele Mackaye's play, "Money Mad," at the Standard theatre last evening, on the question whether Aunt Phillis' prayer is sacrilegious or not, says the New York Sun.

Mr. Mackaye Announced that Judge John R. Brady, Judge H. A. Gilchrist and Mr. Charles Delmonico would count the ballots, and then be concluded: "It is with entire confidence in the humanity and enlightenment which you represent that I look forward to the result of your voting."

A Famous Stage Family.

George Drew Barrymore divides the honors of Crane's new play with the star. It is a remarkable sight to see this gifted woman doing her level best to satisfy her mother with her work, a woman who, at the age of near seventy, is still bidding for the applause of the multitude with Jefferson and Florence at the Fifth Avenue, says a New York letter to the Philadelphia Times.

Over Worked Reclaim.

We have had a real work, nullified in the presence of the audience; a real fire-engine and a real washing of sheep, not to speak of the real oxen, real chickens, real dogs, real hay-seed and real bargains.

So George Ryer, who was my advance agent, and I got together and wrote the sequel to the first play, calling it "The Old Homestead." As to its success and my success—I attribute all to the simple fact that I try to be as true to life as can be.

It is probably not known that I have played in England. It is so, however. In 1882 I went to London, and had a very pleasant experience on the British stage, afterwards performing in Edinburgh and Glasgow.

Tommy Russell Dismissed.

Little Tommy Russell, who has been alternating with Elsie Leslie-Lyde, Ray Marshall and other children in "Little Lord Fauntleroy," received notice of his dismissal from service at Proctor's opera house by Manager French, says a New Haven, Conn., dispatch to the New York Herald.

Music and the Drama.

Baltimore is to have a new theatre. F. C. Mosley is engaged by Louis James for next season.

"The Frenchman" is an amplified and improved version of "Monsieur." Mr. Mansueti has introduced a good deal of new business into the part, and the play has met with unusual success during the star's tour.

The Science of Bumpology.

A Professor Tells How to "Size Up" Intellectual Powers.

Mental Calibre and the Skull.

Dr. Frederiek Peterson, a Prominent Scientist of New York City, Gives the Result of Some Recent Investigations.

One's mental calibre is accurately denoted by the size and shape of his head, says a writer in the New York Herald.

Heretofore this subject has been left to the periphrastic phrenologists who felt a person's "bumps" and judged of the qualities of mind they indicated.

Recently the scientists both in Europe and America have been giving a good deal of attention to the conformation and measurement of the human head or cranium, as they call it.

The studies of Dr. Frederiek Peterson, the insanity expert and specialist in nervous diseases, of New York, have been equally extensive. Their conclusions have not been reached by accurate measurements and not by feeling bumps. Dr. Peterson said to me:

"In men noted for great attainments and intellectual capacity all the diameters and areas of the skull are far above the normal average. In other words, their heads are larger. In many criminals the diameters and areas are below the normal average, and there is also great abnormality in shape, especially in hereditary criminals. One side of the head may be larger than the other, the forehead may be prominent or there may be some other lack of symmetry and proportion. Often the teeth, jaws and ears are deformed. All the higher mental faculties are located in the frontal lobes of the brain, and these naturally have a direct proportion to the length and breadth of the forehead. Just back of this region are the muscular centers and the centers for retentive sensation.
