Opinions of Prominent Kansas Men in the Liquor Law Decision.

A DEATH BLOW TO PROHIBITION.

The Disciples of St. John Taking a Most Melancholy View of the Situation-Resubmissionists Jubilant.

Kansas City, April 30-A Leavenworth special to the Times says: The decision of the supreme court of the United States on the interstate commerce clause of the constitution is received here with much satisfaction. Prominent lawyers who carefully read the decision as reported in the Times are of the opinion that the court has not squarely decided upon the question as to the right of the importer to sell in original packages, but has so plainly laid down its views that there is no doubt what it will do when such a case comes up squarely before it. The court says: "The power vested in congress to regulate commerce among the several states is the power to prescribe the rule by which that commerce is to be governed and is a power complete in itself, acknowledging no limitations other than those prescribed in the constitution. It is co-extensive with the subject on which it acts and can not be stopped at the external boundary of the state, but must enter its interior and must be capable of authorizing the disposition of those articles which it introduces that they may become mingled with the common mass of property within the territory entered."

Mr. Thomas P. Fenion said that this part of the court's opinion is quite clear on the question of right of the importer to sell in original packages.

On January 11 of the present year, the supreme court of this state rendered an opinion on an original package case, the state vs. Fulker. The testimony in the lower court showed that the defendant sold to numerous persons what were called "prize packages," being boxes about twelve inches square in each of which there was a jug of whisky. These boxes were shipped from Nebraska and were sold in Kansas by the defendant in the same form and condition in which they The defendant was in charge f the rainroad depot and express office at Oketo and the boxes were shipped by express from Brule Springs, Neb. Some of those who applied to pur-chase liquor from the defendant presented orders which purported to come from Rawling and from a man called "Ax," but the testimony indicated that the defendant sold to all who applied, regardless of orders, and that many sales were made when no such orders were presented. The defendant asked the court to instruct the jury that if packages containing intoxicating liquors were sold by the defendant in the original packages as de-livered for shipment in Nebraska, and as reeived by him in Kansas, such sales were not violation of the constitution and laws of Kansas relating to the sales of intoxicating The request was refused.

The supreme court of the state held that intoxicating liquors transported from another state to a point in Kansas are subject to the laws of Kansas relating to the sale and dispo-sition of such property to the same extent and in like manuer as are other intoxicating quors already rightfully existing in the late, and can not be sold at the place of destination in the original packages or other form except as the laws of Kansas prescribe. The police power of the state, so exercised, does not infringe on the power delegated to congress to regulate commerce between the states. This case has been appealed to the supreme court of the United States and will be the first of the many cases arising from the prohibitory laws of this state that have been before the same tribunal upon which been before the same tribunal upon which the court can give a fair and square expression of opinion. In the Iowa case the right of importation was only involved, but the court outlined what were the rights following

The case of Bowman vs the Chicago & Northwestern railway company before the supreme court in 1887 was one where the defendant refused to transport liquors from another state to that of Iowa. The court held for the plaintiff. Justice Field dissented from the opinion of the court only in so far that the decision did not go far enough, for the reason that the right of importation must carry with it the right to sell.

Mr. Justice Matthews, who delivered the opinion for the court, held: "It is easier to think that the right of importation from think that the right of importation from abroad and of transportation from one state to another includes, by necessary implication, the right of the importer to sell in unbroken packages at the place where the transit terminates, for the very purpose and motive of that branch of commerce which consists in transportation in that other and consequent act of commerce which consists in the sale and exchange of the commodities transported. Such, indeed, was the point decided in the case of Brown vs Maryland as to foreign commerce, with the express statement, in the opinion of Chief Justice Marshall, that the conclusion would be the same in a case of commerce among the states. But it is not not necessary to express and opinion upon the point because that question does not rise in the present case."

A Topeka special to the same paper says: Attorney General Kellog said: "I am sur-prised and disappointed at the decision. It simply repudiates, as I interpret it, the de-cision of the United States supreme court made forty years ago and which has been the aw during that time. The court then held hat a New Hampshire party could not ship into Vermont, contrary to the prohibitory law in force in the latter state, a barrel of gin bearing the government revenue stamp and sell the same in the original barrel in and self the same in the original parter in violation of the laws of Verment. It is as serious and possibly as dangerous a decision as the famous Dred Scott decision of pro-slavery days. I feel like criticising the court. It is not what the people of the state had a right to expect from the su-preme court of the United States. I hope that there may be something hedging in the decision, that it is not as sweeping in its effect as it now looks, and therefore I am anxious to see the full text. The dissenting opinion is clearer than the decision itself, and I think that the justice who gave that opinion had a correct view of the law and the question.

I are decision, as I read it, is that a party in this state may bring into the state from other tables. states liquors in original packages and can sell the same to a second party without liability to arrest under our prohibitory law. "Then, general, you think that it affects Kansas and that it will make it possible to sell liquor in original packages in that "I am sorry to say it, but I believe that it does that very thing. I fear that it is a serious, if not a fatal, blow to prohibition. Our law has never attempted to prohibit the importation of liquors into this state, for the framers of the law well knew that it would not be done under the statutes of the United States regulating the traffic of common cariers between the states. We have only ought to prevent the sale of such liquors This decision says in substance that we can not prevent the sale of such liquors as long as they remain in the original packages. I fear we must look to congress for relief. This is a temperance state and the people will demand congressional action that will protect us:

Judge Valentine of the supreme court said "I do not like to express an opinion until have seen the full text of the decision. It is goes as far as the dissenting opinion indi-cates it means not only the abolition of Kancates it means not only the about on a Kan-sas liquor laws, but also the license laws of every other state. It means that the intoxi-cating liquors can be shipped in here from Kansas City and sold in the original packages by gills, pints, quarts or barrels. It will have the effect of taking prohibition from the state and making it on national issue. Every preacher, every temperance lecturer, every member of the Womens' Christian Temper-ance union in this land will work on the local congressman. I am surprised at the result. I had fully expected that Lamar, on account of his ultra states' rights ideas, would place a different construction on the law. I thought Fuller would take a different view of it. Harlan and Graw stand where I thought they would, but I thought that Judge Brewer would construe the law differently from what e has. Having these ideas, I naturally con-inded that the Iowa court would be sus-ained. As I say, if the full text of the opinton is as the dispatches indicate, we will be compelled to grant the new trial asked for in case of the state against F. W. Fulker of Marshall county. Until the opinion arrives I can only speak conditionally." Hon, A. B. Campbell, ex-adjutant general, possibly the most prominent prohibition speaker in the state and a present candidate for congress, has taken a most melancholy view of the situation. "The opinion will simply result in a law," he said, "providing that no liquor shall be sold in a state except by a man who has a license from the state to seil. Some years ago Senator Ingalis intro-duced a bill which provided that the United States should issue no government permit except to those authorized by the state to sell. Senator Wilson's bill, which has been favor ably reported upon, will also settle the ques-tion. It will simply transfer the theater of the fight to the congressional districts instead of the courts. I do not think a third party will be necessary or that anything can be a complished by a third party."

"What effect will the original package opinion have on the resubmission movement in Kansas!" was asked President A. L. Allen of the state republican resubmissio

"The effect will be favorable," was the reply, "and, as I believe, instantaneous. I believe the governor will now convene the legislature for an extra session and it is the only logical thing to do. We will have all the evils of the saloon system from this time on with no benefits. Unless we have an extra session the traffic will go unrestrained for the next two years. The people, it occurs to ne, will now insist upon resubmission in order that the importers' traffic which will now spring up may be suppressed and a system established which the state can regulate. The prohibitionists have now nothing to hope for and I believe the next republican convention will declare for high license, If it does not the result may be disastrous. The people will no longer hold back the state the sake of empty sentiment. tion will now present itself to the thinking men: Shall we have the importers' traffic unrestrained, or a high license system with proper regulations and restrictions! The im sorter can sell his jug of whisky with imhigh license and proper regulation this can not be done. The common-sense of the Kansas people will soon settle this question. The estion also occurs if we are to have whisky ad beer free why not manufacture them at Why not invite capital and give em ployment to our laborers? onable excuse for shutting out distilleries and breweries when their products are brought here and sold with impunity, and it will require something more than fine spoker sentiment to hereafter satisfy the people. ook for the most marvelous growth now for the state of Kansus."
Mr. Beecher Sterne, state secretary of the resubmission club, says: "I wish to express to the Times the heartfelt thanks of the re-submission clubs of Kansas. When I say this speak for every resubmissionist in the state, do not think Governor Humphrey will now esitate to call the extra session of the legis lature and I will wait upon him tomorrow.

We will put in the place of prohibition an honest, common sense high liense—one that can and will control the liquor business. We will publish to the world that the wall has been torn down which has stood between immigrant and the state, and we will once more bid him welcome.

BEAUMONT'S PROTEST.

A Letter to McKinley Criticising the Tariff and Silver Bills.

Washington, April 30,-Ralph Beaument, chairman of the national legislative committee of the Knights of Labor, has written Major McKinley a letter criticising the pending silver bill. Beaumont says in part; On what ground of equity and justice does your party decide to confer legal tender powers on these certificates for the purpose for which the national banks desire to use them and refuse the farmers and business men of the country the same privilege!

Beaumont then recalls the discrimination between the trade dollar and the standard ollar and says:

"What is to hinder, under this bill, these same bankers from discriminating against this note, as it is only legal tender for certain purposes? This bill creates money for bankers and notes for farmers. It is not notes the armers are in need of. They are already burdened down with notes. It is money they want with which they may liquidate their indebtedness to their bondsmen. I insist, sir, that if you, as the leader of the house let this measure pass creating these certificates without conferring upon them full legal tender power to enable these overburdened farmers to meet their obligations, you are guilty of committing a wrong and mark it, it is one that both you and your party will have to atone for in the coming ongressional campaign. These everbur-lened tillers of the soil are in no mood to be trifled with. They are desperate. "You, as the leader of your party in the ouse, are on the point of pressing a measure through the house known as a tariff oill. soil from ruinous competition from abroad. Let me again, I beg, warn you that since the last campaign, which was fought out upon this issue, these same tillers of the soil have come to the conclusion that during that campaign they were laboring under a delusion and have come to the further conclusion that it is not from competition from abroad that they are offering, but on the contrary, it is from legal discrimination against them in the interests of corporate wealth by just such unfair legis-lation as is contained in this bill."

THE SEVENTH WARD DAIRIES. Martin Witg Danies That His Place is in a Filthy Condition. Martin Wiig, the dairyman at West Side, claiming that an unaccountable error had been made in the description of his dairy in Tuesday's BEE, a reporter went there yesterday to look it over again. After looking at the stock, which seemed to be sleek and well fed, with the exception of five or six head recently bought in the country, and which were rough and lean on account of their long winter's rustling among the corn stalks, the sheds were visited. The shed nearest the house was nearly new, and cost $300. It smelled quite clean for a cow shed and the floor planks were not unreasonably unclean. Across an alley at the rear of this shed is another which might reasonably be taken as belonging to the same property, but which is owned by Nils Norling, a dairyman, and to the north of it and not a foot away is one belonging to G. Newstrom, the former housing sixteen and the latter eighteen cows. The Norling shed was indescribably filthy. In the corner was the well, surrounded by feed boxes and a water box for cooling the milk. A pailful of the water drawn up smelled disgustingly of manure, and in the water box cans of milk without covers absorbed the stench of the vater in which they were sunk. To the rear of this place is a manure pile at least eighteen feet deep, sloping towards the creek and covered with a thin layer of earth. In this pile, a few feet from the door, is bur-ied the body of a cow. Under the hot sun the stench emitted was nauseating. The re-porter attempted to go to the edge of it to look down into the creek but sank into the fifth and scrambled out in lively style. The shed belonging to Newstrom was in about the same shape, with the exception that his cans are washed at his house about fifty rods away. Norling and Newstrom both water their stock from the creek, into which npties the drainage from the surrounding

The Spring Hill dairy was next visited and a somewhat surly consent given to the re-quest for inspection. AMUSEMENTS.

Years ago, when the Academy of Music was Omaha's first class and only theater, a blonde comedian frequently played there, and in those days he was considered about the funniest man on the stage. Everybody went to see John Dillon, and he was very popular. People used to laugh at him until their sides would ache, and tell most wonderful stories of his artistic ability. He comes around oc-casionally yet, and is still something of an en-tertainer, but his comedy no longer attracts the attention it used to. He has not been able to keep up with the procession. Mr. Dillon appeared at Boyd's opera house last night to a fairly good audience in that old play titled "Wanted the Earth." He was mired, and by his peculiarly breezy manner created an immense amount of incriment, but his company, with possibly one exception, was no better than so many ordinary amateurs.
