ranged for the Occasion. The dull gray light of a typical November day entered through the richly stained glass windows of All Saints' church vesterday morning, and was diffused in softness over the heads of a large congregation gathered to celebrate the fourth parish festival of All

It was a day of thanksgiving and praise and to fitly commemorate the occasion Bishop Worthington was present to conduct the exercises and preach the sermon, while the choir of thirty voices was entrusted with the rendering of music of the highest eccles-Instical character.

The ladies of the parish had decorated the pretty chancel, which is the church home of some of the leading legal, financial and business lights of the city—in a particularly attractive manner. The baptismal font, which stands in the main entrance sisle, was embowered in varicolored chrysanthemums, at the foot of which ferns were effectively placed. The litany desk, the reading desk and the pulpit were entwined with bunches of fern, while a chrysanthemum blossom or two gave a bright look to the furniture. The altar and the reredus were also prettily festooned with the reredas were also prettily festooned with the flowers of autumn.

Mr. Thomas Penneil, the precentor, had arranged a very elaborate musical service for the occasion, which was rendered in a manner worthy the highest praise. No Episcopal church in the city, not even the cathedral choir, endeavors to give the full cathedral music service as All Saints. It has been the choir master's aim to make the service as nearly that advocated by the highest eccle-sizatical authorities as possible, and in this Mr. Penne has been successful.

Mr. Penne has been successful.

'The programme yesterday included the Ryrie, Gloria, Credo in G by Calkin; the Offectorium by Calkin, in which Mr. Pennell sang the introductory solo, "The Lord redeemeth the soul of His servants, and none of them that trust in Him will be desolate," followed by the full choir in the ending. The Introit was written by Gane, and an exceedingly beautiful composition it is. The Benedictus and Gloria were also compositions of Calkin's, who has been one of the most prolific writers of church music. Barring a stight hesitancy on the part of the tenors in the Introit, the work of the choir was extremely praseworthy, and they reflected the thorough, conscientious train-choir was extremely praiseworthy, and they reflected the thorough, conscientious training of a remarkably capable instructor.

Bishop Worthington was the celebrant of the occasion, his sermon showing scholarly research, speaking upon the significance of All Saints' day, and its relation to modern Christian life. He traced the careers of Edward the Confessor, of Louis of France, of the saint of Lucia and found in all their his tories words of cheer for the nineteenth cen-tury believers, who oft' times are jeered at and scoffed as the saints were long years ago. He averted to the duties of parishioners and what they owed to their parish church, and closed with a feeling reference to the Mastery, who after life's fitful fever will dry all the tears of anguish and of pain which His children suffered for His sake.

The choral festival yesterday afternoon closed the services for the day, which were interesting to a degree.

The Duff comic opera company will begin a season of Gilbert & Sullivan's operatio representations at Boyd's opera house this evening, opening with the spectacular production of "Patience." The Duff organizastrengthened for these series of Gilbertian productions, and they will be given here with the same startling scenic and spectacular effects which characterized the famous productions recently at the Auditorium in Chieffects which characterized the famous productions recently at the Auditorium in Chicago. Among the principals of the company are Messrs. Digby Bell, the popular comedian; Charles O. Bassett, who has made himself famous as a tenor in grand opera roles; William McLaughlin, a magnificent basso; Wallace Macrery, Joseph Fay, Clement Bainbridge, J. E. Stille, Miss Lenore Snyder, Miss Louise Beaudet, Miss Lotta Gliman, Miss Edith Edwards, Miss Minnie De Rue and Miss Cornelia Bassett. Mr. Julian Edwards is the musical director of the company, and Mr. John E. Nash is the stage manager. There is a chorus of sixty five voices, and over severally people are employed on the stage. The repertoire for the three performances to be given here is as follows: Monday evening, "Patience;" Tuesday, the "Pirates of Penzance;" Wednesday, "Iolanthe." A review of the musical points of "Iolanthe" cannot fail to be interesting at this time. The finale of the first act is admitted by composers to be the longest and most intricate of all the Gilbert & Sullivan operas. The gem of the opera in point of melody is the contralto song "O, foolish Fay." When Sullivan started to compose "Iolanthe" he became drawn into a serious valin, and as a consequence the music of the opera, apart from its comic setting. serious vain, and as a consequence the music of the opera, apart from its comic setting, would entitle it to a place in grand opera. Gibert also got enthusiastic and the result is that there are exceedingly fine dramatic situations throughout the work. The part of the lord chancellor is one of G'bert's creations, and as an imposing operatic figure as one wishes to see. The plot of "Iolanthe" has a strong current of romance mingled with the comedy, and touches upon ground that Gibert & Sullivan have not since year. that Gilbert & Sullivan have not since vencorrespondent of the Morning Journal.

Liberals all over the country are prais-ing his courageous condemnation of the recent brutal behavior of the police and magistrates at Tipperary, and the conservatives are carsing him with a vigor which shows that they feel his power. They have not been so angry with him

One reason why his political opponents hate him so bitterly is that they recognize in him a convincing opponent. By the power and brilliancy of his language and the cogency of his arguments he is constantly creating opinion in favor of justice to Ireland.

A famous conservative once said: dislike Morley because I am afraid that he will convince me in spite of myself." It was very finely said of him the other day: Gladstone converted the liberals to home rule by the charm of his person-ality; mostly by the irresistability of his Harry Furniss, the clever caricaturist of Punch, who has made comic pictures of everybody else in parliament from Gladstone down, confesses that he has never been able to carleature John Morley. There is something in the intense earnestness of the man's face which defles trivial treatment.

Mr. Morley has the editorial faculty not common with politicians of seeing both sides of a question. This makes him much in demand for the settlement of disputes

While he was an editor, he stood, as it were, behind the radical party, teaching a philosophy which sometimes had an air of radicalism, sometimes the reflection of the teachings of John Stuart Mill. Through all his writings and speeches there breathes a genuine democratic spirit which comes straight from the French philosophers of the eighteenth century. This spirit is clearly perceptible in all the historical studies which he has published.

Nothing arouses his indignation so quickly as a sense of injustice, and it was a lucky day for the Irish cause when John Morley went on his inspection tour to Tipperary. He saw just enough to set his spirit aflame, and he will not cease his vigorous attacks on the land and ridiculous policy of Balfour until it has been ousted and buried underneath the national contempt.

John Morley is a most profitable social companion. He has a certain dignified gravity which at first forbids friendliess and keeps the conversation on a high level, but this wears off more and more at every meeting.

VOLCANO AS AN INCUBATOR. Belching Bogoslor Used by Gulls to

Hatch Their Young. The volcano of Bogoslor, on an island of the Aleutian group, which suddenly burst into activity last winter, and whose flaming summit could be seen for sixty miles, was visited this summer by several officers of the revenue cutter Rush. The volcano is only 200 feet above the sea level. When the crater was opened by the submarine earthquake it is thought volumes of water rushed in which caused the dense clouds of steam that had been arising ever since, says a San Francisco spe-cial to the Chicago Herald. From a fissure at the base of the mountain rose a boiling sulphur fountain. The officers ascended to the cra-ter and on tooking over the edge the steam could be seen in endless quantities rising from unknown depths. Rumbling noises, like thunder, were heard, and the air was impregnated with sulphur. One of the most curious facts discovered was that ocean birds used the island as a natural incubator for their young. Thousands of gulls flew away at the approach of the Rush and left behind them, along the sides of the volcano, eggs in all stages of development. The Rush brought an immense walrus hide, fifteen feet long, to be placed on exhibition at the world's fair.

"Now that a log cabin identified with the life of ex-President Lincoln will be one of the attractions of the world's fair," said Edward W. Cox of the Dennison house, to a reporter for the Cincinnati Times-Star, "I know of a similar structure in which Garfield taught school, and it could be easily purchased and placed beside the humble building that Lincoln knew. The house I speak of is itsetted in Booch Creek township. of is situated in Brush Creek township, Muskingum county. I last saw it when I was taking the census of that district in 1870. Stopping for dinner at the residence of Orin Ballou, a cousin of Garfield, the mother of my host pointed through the window at a solid, substantial hut of logs, and told me that in the squatty, badly lighted tenement, sit-uated on a rough hillside, the then future president of the United States presided over the classes of boys who re-sided in that school district. Ballou was the democratic sheriff of Muskingum county a few years ago."

ROYAL LADIES WHO SMOKE,

Cigarettes and Cigars Enjoyed by Royalty in Europe.

The Empress Elizabeth of Austria mokes from thirty to forty Turkish and Russian eighrettes a day, and for many years it has been her inveterate custom to puff away after dinner at a strong Italian eigar, one of those with a straw running through it, and which is brought o her with her cup of Turkish coffee every evening on a gold salver, says London Tid Bits.

On her writing table are always a large silver box of repousse work filled with eigarettes, a matchbox of carved Chinese jade, and a capacious ash re-ceiver. Afmost mechanically her majesty lights cigarette after cigarette as she sits in her great writing room at Godello, which is fitted up with carved oak panels and gobelin tapestries; the somber hue of the walls being relieved here and there by trophies of the chase.

The ezarina of Russia, who is likewise one of the vassals of King Nicotice, smokes in a somewhat more indolent and almost Oriental fashion. Stretched on the silken cushions of a broad, low divan, at Gatschina, she follows dreamily with her beautiful dark eyes the rings of blue smoke that her crimson lips part to send upward into the per-fumed air of her boudoir—a boudoir which she calls her "den," and which is copied from one of the loveliest rooms of the Alhambra, with palms raising their banners against the gorgeous col ors and dispered gold of the walls.

Queen Marguerite of Italy is another of the royal ladies who see no harm in the use of tobacco. Her flashing black eyes look laughingly through fragrant clouds of smoke and she is wont to declare that her eigarette is more essen-tial to her comfort than anything clse in

Christina, queen regent of Spain, is a great advocate of tobacco. She con-sumes a large quantity of Egyptian cigarettes, and there is nothing that her little "Bubi," his majesty, King Alphonso, XIII., enjoys more than when his mother permits him to strike a match and apply the flame to the end of her

The smoking parapherhalia of the beautiful ex-Queen Natatic of Servia is the most elaborate and magnificent description, while the poet-queen of Rou-mania, so well known in the literary world under the pseudonym of "Curmen Sylva," is content with the gold eigarette case suspended to her chatelaine.

CLEVELAND'S NARROW ESCAPE. A Lunatic Tries to Inflict a Nominat-

Twice recently has Grover Cleveland escaped arenomination to the presidency by being absent from home. The gentleman who desired to confer the henor upon him at present in the insane pavillion at Bellevue. He is Felix Armstrong, and gives his address as at the Washington hotel, 2291 Third avenue, He called at Mr. Cleveland's house, 816 Madison avenue, and grandiloquently asked if Mr. Cleveland was in, says a New York special to the Chicago Her-ald. Mr. Cleveland was not in. He called the next evening by appointment and met Policeman Collins in the hall

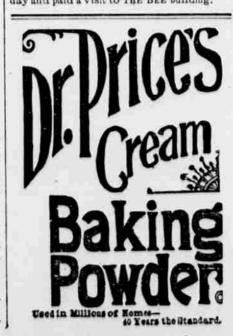

Armstrong confided to Collins that he wanted Mr. Cleveland to get Daniel out of the lion's den. He thought that the Daniel has staid too long among the lions. Armstrong started with alacrity for the police station when requested to "come along." At the station he mistook Detective Martin for the ex-president. Removing his hat with a sweeping gesture and making a courtly bow, he said: "Mr. Cleveland, our convention, which has assembled 500,000 strong, the farmers' alliance and anti-trust combination, has unanimously placed you in nomination with the positive assurance that you will be elected." Mr. Armstrong is in

Ned Christie, the most distinguished outlaw within the Territory, unless it is Bill Pigeon, is receiving close attention of Deputy Marshals A, B. Ward and C. L. Bowden, says a Muskogee, I. T., special to the St. Louis Republican.

Christie was a member of the Chero-kee council, and about two years ago as-sassinated Deputy United States Marshal Dan Maples, from ambush, for some reason unknown. He at once took to the brush, where he has since been in hidng. About two weeks ago the abovenamed officers learned that Christic was located about fifteen miles northwest of Tahlequah, and they proceeded to his rendezvous with a posse or two. The outlaw, it was discovered, had with him seven pals and brother desperadoes. These men have built two "fort" houses arranged on an elevation commanding a favorable view, and from which forts the inmates have a cross-fire on the only approach to their stronghold. The offi-cers were warned, and after a consulta-tion quietly withdrew, it is believed to make a subsequent attack when the odds are in their favor.

Boils and Pimples

Are nature's efforts to eliminate poison from the blood. This result may be accomplished much more effectually, as well as agreeably, through the proper excretory channels, by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

"For several years I was troubled with boils and carbuneles. In easting about for a remedy, it occurred to me that Ayer's Sarsaparilla had been used in my father's family, with excellent success, and I thought that what was good for the father would also be good for the son. Three or four bottles of this medicine entirely cured me, and I have not since — in more than two years — had a boil, pimple, or any other eruptive trouble. I can conscientiously speak in the highest terms of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and many years' experience in the drug business enables me to speak intelligently."—C. M. Hatfield, Farmland, Ind.
