

THE CONDITION OF TRADE.

A Boyant Feeling Characterizes the Opening of the New Year. TOURISTS PREPARING FOR A CAMPAIGN. An Improved Feeling at Home and All Over the Country—Every Reason to Anticipate a Big Business in 1891.

It has been asserted by some writers on commercial topics that sentiment does not enter into business, but if that be true what shall that something be called which does enter into it? It is the prevailing sentiment is on the side of the prophets of "good times coming" how everything brightens up. This was plainly visible during the past few days. A month ago business men were inclined to shake their heads dubiously and to look perplexed and grave when the subject of the future of trade was broached. Money was close and tight, and slow, but as the financial prospect brightened, business men commenced to look forward to the first of the year as the turning point for the better. The first of the new year has arrived, and while it is too early to form any exact idea of the correctness of the predictions made a few weeks ago, it is self-evident on every hand that the feeling is all better.

A part of this may be due to the influence of the associations surrounding the opening of the new year—a time when every man is inclined to look upon the bright side of all things and let bygones be bygones. Traveling men are packing their samples and laying out their routes, and in a few days they will be out on the road again for another year.

The actual amount of business transacted last week was small in jobbing circles, as no one tried to do any business, but the week was rather given up to rest and to the laying out of plans for the work to come. The conditions prevailing in Omaha at the present time are very similar to what is reported from other parts of the country, and it is safe to say that the feeling all over the country is much better than it was a month ago.

As usual at the opening of a new year, the feeling in the country is somewhat depressed. It is too early in the year to talk much about the manner in which business collections will turn out, but the January of Friday and yesterday were satisfactory both with bankers and jobbers and indications are that business men generally have been liberally given to rest and to the laying out of plans for the work to come. The completion of railroad extensions in Black Hills country during the past year has made a large and rapidly developing territory directly tributary to Omaha and the local business is prepared to take full possession of the new acquisition.

Altogether the business men of Omaha have reason to confidently expect a big year's business in 1891.

THE PLASTERERS' DELIBERATE.

He Will Strive to Secure the National Convention for Omaha. The plasterers' union held their most important meeting of the year Friday night. Officers were elected and arrangements were made to send Mr. Jack Brown to the national convention, which meets in Boston. Mr. Brown has been elected to the master position. At Friday night's meeting he was instructed to do all in his power to secure the next national convention for Omaha. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: John Cramer, president; Sterling Edmonds, vice president; Eugene Barnes, treasurer; John Mitchell, financial secretary; A. Potter, recording secretary; Jack Brown, corresponding secretary; E. Walsh, reporter; W. J. Carroll, secretary; Mike O'Brien and John Warner.

Plumbers and Pipefitters. Plumbers and Pipefitters Dennis states that between forty and fifty licenses will be issued to master plumbers and drain layers. The restrictions, regulations and qualifications are the same as last year. The applicant must deposit $10 with the city treasurer to pay for his license, furnish a bond with two sureties for the amount of $200 over and above all debts, submit the certificate of some responsible citizen to the effect that the applicant is qualified to be a master plumber, and must deposit $50 in the paving maintenance fund in case he desires to do work on the streets. The latter provision is made to insure the reliability of the paving in case of any default on the part of the contractor. The applicant must also deposit $50 in the paving maintenance fund in case he desires to do work on the streets. The latter provision is made to insure the reliability of the paving in case of any default on the part of the contractor.
