the claimed that he had had had an opportunity to become better acquainted with Hall, and it was on the strength of this nequalitatore that the defense introduced him as a witness. In general, Millor's testi-mony was that Hall had been in the babit of walking to the vehiclow of the county jail and pointing out at his children, who he said were obtained by the county for any set. In the days when most of the travel playing in the yard. He considered him par-tially issane. On cross-examination County Attorney Organ attempted to throw a cloud between St. Louis and St. Paul was accomplished by steamboat, Commodore Davidson owned and operated the lead-ing line of upper Mississippi boats, says Attorney Organ attempted to throw a cloud over Miller's statements by probing into his past life. He asked him what had been the last work he did. Mil-lerthought some time, but apparently couldn't think back that far. He after some time stated that he had been in the picture busi-ness previous to his arrest. The name of the time for which he worked he would not dis-tered as a more than the picture busithe Analostan Magazine. His greatest enjoyment was story telling. He would if he could have an appreciative listen-er; and since most of his stories were the close, for that would give away his true name. After a cross-examination of some length, he admitted that all he knew about the case was that Hall had at times appeared autobiographic and true he seldom wanted for an audience. One of his pet stories was about a pilot who had been discharged from an opposition line be-cause he had run his boat upon a snag absent minded and had acted strangely, but whether or not he was insane he could not and sunk her. When the fellow came to say. The first witness in the afternoon was Dr. Stewart. He kept a livery stable next to that of David Gray, and had often noticed Hall's queer actions when he was at work. He described him as being "cross, crabbed and cranky," but he seemed not to know that the question of insanity was at stake, and he would not admit that he had ever seen anything in Hall that would lead him to think that he was even partially insane. Mande Hail, the youngest daughter of the defendant, was then pat upon the stand for a the commodore for employment he seemed to be rather proud that he had struck the snag. "I don't want pitots who run upon

"But you do strike snags." further funct, was then put upon the stand for a further questioning as to what occurred on the evening preceding the shooting of Mrs. Hall. No acw facts of any particular im-portance were elicited from her testimony. "I used to, commodore, but I don' now, I've been running on snags in this river off and on now for 15 years, and I've hit every one of em, every blamed me of 'em, commodore. But I never hit toms that characterise insanity, and his ex-amination lasted some time. His cross-examination, however, lasted a good deal longer. County Attorney Organ asked him if he thought Hall was insane at the time he examined him some after the shooting, how it was that he did not say so to the grand jary when he gave his testimony before it. In reply he stated that his reason for neglecting to do so was that the grand ary had not taken the trouble to get it out of him. He also said a few minutes after that he had changed his mind since the grand jary was in session, as he had made a more careful examination of the case. "Do you know the river?" the commodore asked. "Yes sir. "Know where the snags are, do you?"

"No sir: I don't." "Then how in the world do you expect to handle a boat safely?" "Well, commodore, I know where the snags an't, and that's where I always Abused the Wrong Man.

Sam Davis, the funny man of Carson, Nev., recently took a trip to San Francisco. A correspondent from there tells this story at the expense of the newspaper man: While here Davis was shocked to read the news of the death in Butte City, of "Did I employ him?" said the commo-dore in telling of it. "Of course I did. He had brains, and I'll always give brought about in a peculiar way. One of them explained that the day before in San Francisco "Doc headaches and other forms of sickness, For O'Neill had been shot and killed by gambler named Mush-head Bill, "Well?" inquired Mr. Davis. "Oh," the gentleman said, "we want you to give O'Neill a good send off and burn Mush-head up.⁴ " What for?"

is no more wisdom in that speech than can be found in that verbal initiquity: 'Nothing succeeds like success,' and it is an insuit to send any such blank cart-ridge at a man." The speaker was a physician of good standing, and he coa-timued: "I have had a great many patients in my life all through excessive se of tobacco or liquor in some form and I never knew of a single curate abruptly stopping the habit. On the other hand I have seen repeated recoveries by gradually lessening the isof whatever stimulant was being used.

How He Stopped.

The plain, matter-of-fact man had been delivering an animated and ex-haustive discourse to his wife on the subject of Easter bonnets when she took occasion to remind him that his nat was positively disgraceful, says the Washington Post. Several of his acquaint-ances had told him substantially the same thing and he determined to get a new one.

"'I wish," he said, as he left the house, "that you could come with me and find out how a little shopping could be done without stopping the machinery of business in a store as a woman always does. After attending to the immediate requir ments of his correspondence he went to the hatter's. He spent five or ten minutes outside inspecting the display in the show-window, and formulat ing a phrase which would convey the impression that he purchased on an average at least one hat a week, he stepped inside and remarked in hesitating accents that belied his assumption of ease in manner: "I want-to-look at a-hat."

"Yes, sir. Step this way. Something like the one you have on?" the clerk inquires after a critical glance.

'Why, is this in style?" he inquires undeniably embarrassed. "Not exactly. Here is the very latest fully, twists it gently about and turning to the salesman, says:

'Now, what do you think of it?" "It's a very nice hat, sir." "Of course. No doubt of it. But-en do you think it becomes me?" "It looks very well."

"Suppose you show me something "How is this style?"

"No, that makes me look like a hay eed.

"Here's another." "That's better; I like that." "It was very popular last season."

"Eh? Ain't it the correct thing now?" "Oh, I have no doubt you will see a great many, but-"

"I guess I will take the one you showed me first. Only if I decide that I don't like it, within a day or so, can 1 exchange it?'

"Certainly."

The Claim Fraud.

The suits which were mentioned a few days ago as soon to be commenced by the Petersen brothers of Weston against the Mutual life insurance company of New York and its Council Bluff's agent, E. W. Kappell, were began in superior court yesterday morning. There are two stuts, in one of which Nels Peterson is plaintiff, and in the other Hans, his brother. The petitions state that E. W. Peet & Co. are the western representatives of the Mutual and that they have given over to Kappel the entire management of their business in Council Bluffs and the vicinity, in spite of the fact that they know that be is not it to be trusted with such a business. They claim that by means of faise representations for the such the trusted with such a business. Kappell induced them to take out policies for $5,000 each, with the understanding that after paying three full premiums the policies might be returned, the holders to receive back the full amount that they had paid in, together with interest. On these representations they each gave a personal note of $200, and a joint note of $400. These notes, they claim, have been passed on the headquarters of the company, and the company now re-fuses to usue any policies containing the provisions that Kappeli promised. On this ac-count they demand a judgment of $100 each, together with the costs of the suit.

In addition to the two suits brought by the Petersons another was filed by Hans Hansen Torop, in which the allegations are sub-stantially the same as in the others, excepting that the policy issued to this plaintiff was for $2,000, the premium paid $08 and the amount of the judgment demanded $100.

All three of the suits are brought by the law drm of Sims & Saunders, while Harle & McCabe appear for the defendants. The attorneys for the defence claim that they will to disprove the charges of false representation which are made against their clients.

Farewelt Reception.

A very pleasant reception took place last evening at the residence of Miss Ida Wallace, on Bluff street, it being in the nature of a farewell to Mr. W. S. Homer, who expects to leave the city in the near future. The early part of the evening was spent in various amusements, after which elegant refresh-ments were served. The following is a list of those present. Misses Crofts, Chamberof those present. Misses Crofts, Chamber-laia, Sutter, Helen Spooner, Carrie Spooner, Ross, Maxwell, Wallace, Buchell Messrs. Stole His Clothing.

George Gilman of Missouri Valley was in the city vesterday looking for a young man who, he thinks, went through his room there Monday night. During the night some one entered his room and stole a lot of clothing. Yesterday morning he found his clothing missing and also his room-mate, and the coin-cidence led Mr. Giaman to think that they went off together. His case was reported to the authorities, but up to a late hour last night no trace of either the thief or the stolen property had been found.

A number of hooks were before the court in evidence, on the subject of insmity. Dr. Cook quoted quite freely from these, but stated that he had not read their contents for perhaps twenty years or more. There was one large sheep bound, loorned looking book that the county attorney picked up and foodled a mo-ment, after which he said : druggists.

"O perhaps that accounts for your change of ophican in regard to the old man's in-sanity," said Organ. At this a smothered laugh went the rounds of the court room, a small piece of which might have been detected in the soleman face of the court by a man of good imagination. All the while Attorney Ayles worth was ex-amining a paper which be held in his hand with an air that would indicate that his life depended on his flading out its contents within the next five minutes: he had evi iently been far, far away when the laugh at his expense had been going around. Blaine and the Free Ticket Man. James G. Blaine is fond of spicing con versation with a story. This is one that he has made due duty more than once: "A man accepted a free ticket to a theater. The play was not a good one, and the actors were thoroughly in accord with the standing of the play. At the end of the first act there were groans and hisses and other vehement expressions of disapproval on the part of the audience. The free ticket man sat still and seemed satisfied. When the second act began it proved to be worse than the first, and nearly every one in the audience groaned his utter disgust except the free ticket man. Finally a man who sat near the free ticket man said: 'My friend, are you disgusted with the play? "'Yes, very much."

"Then why the duce don't you groan and hiss?' "I can't do it decently. I am here on a free ticket given by the head of the theatrical company. If the play grows worse I will go out after the next act, buy a ticket and come back and express my disapproval in a vehement way. Weather Probabilities for March.

If March comes in like a jion it will go out like a lamb, and vice versa. But every day in the month, rain or shine, the electric lighted, steam heated, vestibaled limited trains of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway will run between Omaha and Chicago. The elec-

"Doc was a friend of ours, and we want you to put in your best licks," said the gentleman, placing two $20 pieces on the trible-"Sir" cried the journalist, half rising. "You might as well take 'em," said the gentleman. "I just win them at faro.

"Oh, in that case," remarked Mr. Davis pocketing the coin and instantly becoming warmly and sympathetically interested. "Why certainly. I'll write just what I feel. Doc O'Neil was white clean through. I knew him well, and a more loveable character never breathed By the way, what's the other name of this Mush-head Bill?"

"Taylor." "Taylor!" cried Mr. Davis, his tone affame with manly scorn and detestation. "Taylor! Why, that's the same cowardly, murdering scrub that assassinated Dobson a year or so ago, ain't it?' peer "No," said the gentleman quietly. "I killed Dobson.

"Oh," said Mr. Davis. The gentleman was Jack Tyler.

The trouble was, of course, so far as each individual was concerned, that their services could not be employed at a profit by any one, the markets, perhaps, being al ready stocked with bread, and clothes. and shoes, and there being no money in making any more. For it must always be remembered that the aim of industry. as at present organized, is not to meet the needs of the people but to produce such things as people can buy, so that bursting bakeries and starving bakers are perfectly compatible with each other.
