ern states in regard to the present condition of the railread problem, has given rise to many speculations seeking to explain the cause or to suggest the remedy. The most recent addition to the literature upon this subject is a paper upon "The West and the Railreads," contributed to the current num-ber of the North American Review by Presi-dent Sidney Dillon of the Union Pacific rail-way. That he should attempt to sustain the dent Sidney Dillon of the Union Pacific rail-way. That he should attempt to sustain the attitude of the corporation is only to be ex-ected, and though he adduces no new argu-ments he defines the position now taken by the railroad magnates. The most unhappy portions of the paper are those in which he gives vent to some autiquated economic sophisms which have no bearing whatever upon the actual industrial world. It is well to keep in mind what President Dillon is attempting to maintain. The prono-

Dillon is attempting to maintain. The propo-sition he seeks to establish is that railsuch he seeks to establish is that rail-ways are not oppressive engines of capital and are not the enomies of labor; but that they are, in sober truth, the best friends to-day of the American people, and that they are in a large degree the means and the evi-dence of the unexampled prosperity of the United States. The complaints of the public are cited, namely, that the roads have in numerous instances been fraudulently over-capitalized and excessively loaded with bond-capitalized and excessively loaded with bond-ed debt; that they monopolize traffic; that they charge unjust rates of freight in order to pay dividends on fietitious values of stock; that they favor one class of shippers at the

that they favor one class of shippers at the expense of another class; that they pervect the accumulation of unreasonably large for-tunes and tend to make the rich richer and the poor poorer. It is by showing the groundlessness of all these charges that President Dillon hopes to sustain his thesia. His method is unique. He neither accepts nor denies the justice of the complaints, but relies on a longthy paneary is non the beau few years had outstripped its Iowa neighbor. President Dillon would make the reason lie in the assertion that Omaha is the terminus of the Union Pacific. But the fact is just the reverse: Omaha never has been, nor is it now, the terminus of the Union Pacific, and Mr. Dillon has done more than any other man in America to keep the Union Pacific terminus on the 10wa side. According to President Dillon, many of the grievances urged against the railways are too puorile to be seriously noticed but he deigns to touch upon a few although with general disastrous results. It is evident that his con-ception of capital has not been the result of any profound study of political economy, but however confused his ideas upon that subject may be, he finally arrives at the correct con-ciusion that railways are simply a manifestation of capital put to work. If the investment is capitalized too largely, it merely means that it pays smaller dividends. The distinction between the rate of dividends upon the face value of the stock and the actual amount of

It is method is unique. He heither accepts nor denies the justice of the complaints, but relies on a lengthy panegyric upon the bene-fits conferred by the railroads, in order to drown the clamor of opponents without draw-ing upon facts or historyto prove his points. Any one can concur in the remarks upon the wonderful growth of the west simulta-neously with the introduction of the railroad; but to assume that the latter has been the sole cause of this development is to ignore history and to exaggerate the influence of one only of the factors of the movement. What has caused the influx of immigrants to the great west? What has determined the riso of our western cities? Answers differ. Presi-dent Dillon's reply is "the railroads." It is useless for a reasonable person to ascribe it to any one element. The growth of the west, while given an impetus by railway construc-tion, has continued in spite of the railways. Take the case of Omaha. It started in the arace far behind Council Bluffs, yet in a very few years had outstripped its Iowa neighbor. As if the problem of reasonable rates could be decided at all without knowledge of the true ratio of earnings to the capital invested! But President Dil-lon offers his own solution to the rate problem. He merely calls for a revival of the antiquated "let alone" doctrine.

To sustain his position upon this point, he has brought out from the musty records of politi cal philosophy, the old Benthamite theory of government is that which governs least." Statutory enactments interfere with the business of the railway and always to its detriment. He state it as a proverb that the chief wisdom o He state legislatures is shown in repealing th statutes enacted by previous legislatures. The logical termination of the doctrine in extreme anarchism is not followed up. If the provero be true, then that legislature is wisest which blots out, at one fell swoop, everything written upon the statute books and thus enables man to return to his idealistic state of nature. But if statutes are excluded, what is to

Two first class residence properties near high school, owned by non-resident, will be sold before May 1st to the highest bidder. Room 20, Frenzer block, opposite P. O. 133 But if statutes are excluded, what is to protect the interests of the public! Competi-tion! Competition is the catch-word at which every one may grasp. Competition may, as is claimed, be based upon inmutable founda-tions, but when the action is obstructed, or when it fails to act at all, something must be found to supply its place. This is what Pres-dent Dillon ignores. Definite rates have may and do show that freight rates have FORSALE-Beautiful acre adjoining Cen-tral Park addition A bargain at $500, $400 cash. Every-where the railroad is by nature wholly or in part a practical monopoly and the rates are fixed so as to bring the largest net revenue without decreasing the traffic. Competition in such cases is, at best, but a latent and po-tential factor. Suppose rates are so high as to induce the construction of a maraliel line. FOR SALE-Briggs Place lots on motor line, Also acre property, F. M. Richardson, SIS N. Y. Life bldg. 362 to induce the construction of a parallel line. In the absence of legislation, the burdensome exactions continue until the new line is put in operation; and what then is the result! Two lines exist where there is only traffic for

All this does not dull the fortile imagina-tion of the railway president. The civil courts and the common law form the panacea behind the bulwark of competition. If a company discriminates in its rates, if a com-pany inflicts injuries, let the oppressed in-voke protection of the law. On paper it reads very finely but in practice the process reads very finely but in practice the process is not so efficacious. The courts are slow in grinding out their judgments and in the meantime the abuses may remain. Under present productive methods, it needs but a slight discrimination to ruin a man in a very short time. Railroad officials are unscru-pulous and the conscience of the average juryman is not proof against their dazzling inducements. The litizant must bear the heavy court fees while the railroad attorney, hired by the year at an enormous salary. fights the case to the last resort. The com-mon law does very well in ordinary eivil suits but as protection to the public against fich and oppressive corporations, it has failed and past experience does not promise any-thing better from it in the future.

and past experience does not promise any-thing better from it in the future. The glowing advertisement of the re-sources of the west as pictured by the rail-road's most devoted friend, Hon. Jesse Spalding of the government directory of the Union Pacific, forms an elegant conclusion to a mediocre article. Throughout the whole paper the true rallway problem is ignored. The question now confronting us is not that of returning to the lessez-faire (let alone) policy of twenty years ago; it is how to real-ize the benefits of railway construction and of railway consolidation, while at the same time remedving the abuses which every com-plex development introduces. The present outlook is for a continued consolidation, ter-minating ultimately in the official fixing of outlook is for a continued consolidation, ter-minating ultimately in the official fixing of rates by a government commission, and it may in due time culminate in absolute national ownership and management.
