MINE HIDDEN UNDER A TRAIL.

Rich Strike on the Road Over Which Spectators were Hauled to Another Mine.

CAREFUL PROSPECTING REWARDED.

New Gold and Copper Finds in Wyoming's Gold Hill District—Excursion of Miners to the New Camp.

SARATOGA, Wyo., June 24.—[Correspondence of THE TRIBUNE.] Prospectors are fast finding out that this section is a veritable "new" country so far as its mineral resources are concerned. The men who have opened up here during the past few weeks and taken up the hunt for mineral-bearing ledges on the mountains which surround the upper Platte valley have, as a rule, already been rewarded. While there is less common here now than there was earlier in the season, nobody who keeps posted as to the prospect work recently done, need lose no faith in this part of Carbon county as a prospective billion producer. More than half is being done right now than at any other time since the Gold Hill excitement began. Prospectors not boomers are masters of the situation. The men who sit down and content themselves with tramping his find of the past will not be anywhere near the sight of the line when the procession begins to move. It is safe to say that some of the strikes made by the new comers or in fresh fields will eclipse those which helped advertise the Gold Hill camp. While The Tribune has endeavored to present to the public its own opinion of that locality, the friendly advice has often been repeated that search should be made elsewhere for rich mineral veins. It is not too late to do so. There are indications so encouraging that a good mining man wouldn't think of ignoring them unless he had a bonanza in sight. Prospect work where these favorable signs abound had met with marked success. Until development shall be possible on Gold Hill there is no excuse for idleness on the part of any miner who is not already loaded down with claims there. One of the partners in valuable properties on Gold Hill put in his time to good advantage a few days ago by making some locations near the scene of the strike at the head of Lake creek, previously reported in The Tribune. He had no trouble in enlisting partners who are to furnish the working capital for opening up his claims.

THAMPORED OVER A MINE.

Over on the Sierra Madres, which bound the Platte valley on the west, prospectors are beginning to pick into the ledges which run in great belts across the Continental divide from the Atlantic to the Pacific slope. In some cases a little surface work has turned out so well that prospectors have immediately made for exploiting such leads. One instance may be cited to indicate the success attending careful and systematic prospecting. Pretty well up on the range between Jack creek and the north fork of Spring creek are some claims located a number of years ago by State Senator Frank O. Williams and Henry Jones. They were among the first to pick the pioneer prospectors on that part of the Continental divide. They have a claim there called the Alma on which enough work has been done to secure a United States patent. It has been developed to such an extent that good silver rock has been taken out which will pay to ship. There are a number of tons of sorted ore on the dump that will run high in silver. The road over which machinery and supplies have been hauled up to the Alma for a number of seasons back leads over a backbone crossing the divide.

by John Paulson and Harley Brewer, which looks very promising. They traced the lead for several miles, and then they dug down only a few feet, where the ledge dropped out bold. Galena ore was struck in two wide streaks, one of which was about 100 feet wide, and the other only a few feet wide. The small amount of work which has been done here are indications that a genuine assuasive has been discovered. Even if the locators was demonstrated by the prompt action taken to develop their claim. Without making any ado over their find Paulson and Brewer are looking for a big strike. They started a pack outfit with supplies for a camp at the new find. They started on their trip on Sunday, June 22, and will be back in a few days. They will be back in a few days. They will be back in a few days.

CAN'T PROSPECT TOO CAREFULLY.

That such a find should be made in the neighborhood of a mine belonging to Jones and Williams will occasion something bordering closely on a sensation when the facts become generally known. Both are deservedly esteemed as honest and good miners because they have faithfully developed the claims they located without making any fuss over it, and have seen not a little experience. That such men should have missed so good a prospect as this is a pity. It is a pity that such men should have missed so good a prospect as this is a pity. It is a pity that such men should have missed so good a prospect as this is a pity.

Good reports continue to come from the French Creek country where a big silver lead was traced along the bed of the stream last month. Some of the prospectors who had been waiting at Laramie for a chance to get into Gold Hill from that place in the event of a road being opened over the snowy range made a rush for French creek. When the Laramie folks had abandoned their route to Gold Hill as impracticable an attempt was made to strike the miners for French creek. The road which Laramie had a road part of the way. The difficulties to be encountered were too great for the miners to attempt. A few went in with pack outfits and new locations were made by them. The original locators plan being to open up some of their claims in the new country. If a good showing is made the Saratoga road of trade will build a road into the new country. The distance from the head of Gold Hill and was the scene of operations for a number of years of an old prospector known as "Dutch Joe" about whom and his work there is a large amount of talk. For a long period he was reputed to have annually taken out enough gold to support himself, but he jealously guarded his secret as to the source from which the treasure was obtained. "Joe's" sudden disappearance, his mining operations and hermit-like existence, formed the basis for a number of legends of the character which surrounds the "Lost Cabin" and "Adams' Claims" in mining legends. There is no doubt that the work done at some time in the past somebody had faith sufficient to expend much time if not money in development work there. A sixty-foot shaft was sunk and there are other indications that were taken out or else the indications were so encouraging as to warrant a systematic search for an open body. With the work already done it will be an easy matter to find the shaft is cleaned out to determine whether the original locators stay by the lead.

THE BIRTH OF A PRAYER.

John Bird in Good Words. Fair voices borne on organ waves, With lifted lutes the dimly glowed, And thro' the air the sweetest tones, The twelve Apostles craned in stone. Looked grimly down upon the nave, Where faces shined as their own. No sign of kindling fervor gave. The music and the sunshine kept their secret from the glad eyes well, As o'er our heavy souls they swept. The tale of empty praise to tell; Nor gazed they on the dim gray walls, Nor the sweet host that falls Within a church, warm hearts to prayer. I saw a gray old man bend down His shaggy head, his furrowed face, And with a tremulous hand he said: Help his weas led to lead the place. The two heads bobbed about the page, And withered leaves at play; One finger plucked one crooked with age, Picked verse by verse the doubtful way. Great glasses, jiggling to the lines, Braced his dim eyes the words to trace. While the small porter watched the signs And hope or failure in his face. The knotted bumper stood at last, So did the plume with an air, And up and down such looks were cast That in my heart was born a prayer.

THE SAGE OF NINNING.

Ignatius Donnelly, the Brilliant Author and Statesman. The Illustrated American of the issue of June 27, publishes a fine full-page portrait of Hon. Ignatius Donnelly, and an accompanying sketch of his brilliant career. Omaha people will be afforded the opportunity of hearing Mr. Donnelly this evening at DeWitt's opera house, where he will deliver his celebrated lecture on "The Mistakes of Ingersoll in Literature and Religion." Cardinal Gibbons, the highest prelate of the Roman Catholic church in America, pronounces the lecture to be of the highest literary form. Ingersoll's pretty-colored eulogy of Shakespeare, which he recently delivered here, will be picked to pieces as only a master critic of Donnelly's stamp can do it, and he will attempt to show how utterly impossible it was for a man of Shakespeare's limited education to have written the works popularly attributed to him. The following is the sketch of Mr. Donnelly's career: The new people's party may not have much chance of electing the next president of the United States, but, as the purpose of the Illustrated American in publishing presidential possibilities is to exhibit the leading candidates of all parties, it adds a farmers' alliance man to its gallery this week. Most notable among the people's party candidates is Ignatius Donnelly, the sage of Ninning. He was born in Philadelphia fifty-eight years ago. He was educated for a lawyer, but dropped and changed from law to politics, and from politics to literature and combined politics and literature. Formerly a republican, he drifted into the democratic ranks and has ever since been a democrat. During the war he was governor of Minnesota, and was later lieutenant governor for four years. He served in the state senate for five years and afterward represented his district in the house of representatives for six years. It was in 1852 that he began unraveling the mystery of the cipher. He owned a photographic copy of the earliest full edition of Shakespeare's plays, and in his charming home near Hastings, Minn., he pored over the leaves and discovered that William Shakespeare was a fraud. How did he come to think of the cipher in the first place? His attention was first called to it by reading a chapter in a book which a friend gave him of his own. It was called "Every Body's Book: An Encyclopedia of Sports and Amusements." He had long been a devotee of the game of chance, and Bacon had a hand in writing the plays, and How She Lost Her Lover.

'Twas a summer day when he left me here, A summer of smiles with never a tear, Till I said to him with a sob, my dear! Good-bye, my lover; Good-bye! For I loved him, oh, as the stars love night! And my cheeks for him flushed red and white. When he first called me his heart's delight Good-bye, my lover; good-bye. The touch of his hand was a thing divine, And said to me in the soft moonshine. And I said to him, 'I will be true to you; Good-bye, my lover; good-bye. And never a night as I knelt in prayer, But in fancy he came and kissed me there: Good-bye, my lover; good-bye. But now, O God! what an empty place My white heart is! Of the old embrace Good-bye, my lover; good-bye. He called not over the stormy sea, And he went not down in the waves, not he; But oh, he is lost, for he married me! Good-bye, my lover; good-bye.

A Cure For Harbors.

Mr. J. A. Burdison of Colburn, Montgomery county, Ia., has found out how he can cure any case of diarrhea. Two of his children had the disease, for about six weeks he tried four different patent medicines without benefit, but he finally got hold of a bottle of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and he says completely cured them, and he is confident it will cure any case of the kind. He has printed directions as follows: 'My very small pills but a very good one. Dr. Williams' Little Pills for Pale People. Men, who have power, for it is usually the setting themselves.
