BEN BUTLER'S LIFE STORY.

DEDICATED TO THE GRAND ARMY.

His Legal and Military Career Reviewed and Some of His Peculiar Acts Explained-His Votes for Jeff Davis.

BOSTON, Mass., June 29.-The long expect ed auto-biography of General Benjamin Butler will very soon be put in the hands of the American public. It will be issued in a single volume and will be sold by subscription exclusively. The title of this work will be "Butler's Book," and it is advertised as a complete review of his legal and military career. It is dedicated to the good and brave soldiers of the Grand Army of the Republic. The first chapter gives attention to the matter of blood and breeeding.

"The politic system of this country," General Butler says, "is founded on what Rufus Choate once termed the glitter of generality contained in the declaration of independence. that all men are created equal. This is a truth applied to political rights, immunities and purdens, but is utter absurdity so far as it is made to describe other mutual relations

General Butier dwells at length in several chapters upon his childhood days and early manhood, and pays his respects to several persons and institutions with characteristic distinctness. For instance, he says: "My family had not a coat of arms, and I have been taunted with the fact by my political foes, some of whom price themselves on an ancestry which won distinction by amassing wealth from the sale of codfish and New England rum, with which in early colonial times Africa was supposed to be Christian-ized. At such times I have been tempted to reply, since I had before me all the swords of generations, each actually worn in the military service of the country: "Tis true my family has no coat of arms, but we have the Genera Butler sent his son 1'aul to Har-vard, "not," he says, "because I deemed it the best school in the country, but because I could not foretell what might be his future and I chose he should not be hindered, as his father has been, by the fact that he was not a graduate of Harvard. A class of Mass-achusetts people believe that a course at that college is indispensible to advancement in al-most any pursuit in life, especially political, and as soon as a graduate obtains pelitical preferment he is hailed as the scholar in pol-ities." General Butler dates his political career from the inception of the temperance move-ment. Then began the struggle. It was a long and a very hard one. He says: "There was no bad name that could be used that was not liberally bestowed. But the leaven was not neerally bestowed. But the leaven of right eventually leavened the whole and finally produced the bread of life for the workingman." He says further: "I re-mained a bronounced and somewhat promi-nent member of the democratic party. We ten-hour men introduced ten-hour reselu-tions into its platforms, and the philanthropic free soil party, which began to obtain a hold in our state, adopted our ten-hour proposi-tions before it nominated Van Buren in 1848." Later on, in 1849, General Butler was in favor of coalition between the free soilers and the democrats. The democratic party held to the dectrine that the constitution recognized slavery and that slavery could be abolished by an amendment to the constitution, whereas the free soil party, in the lan-guage of one of its leaders, William Lloyd Garrison, held that the constitution was "a covenant with hell and a league with death."

General Butler says that he was very strongly in favor of such coalition, because he saw a hope of ten-hour legislation and he added: Although I stood with the democracy, I did not feel myself obliged by my party relations to go bounding over the graves of my fathers to catch a fugitive slave—who was seeking Canada when it was not made my duty by legal enactment." General Butler's very interesting resume of his war experience has in substance been read by almost everybody before, and it is part of the common tradition of American life. But the expression of political opinion which is included in the chapter of the preliminaries of the war ought to be read by everybody, "The politics in which I very early took part was that practical politics which deals with the condition and welfare of the citizen. From my earliest youth I had been taught to believe in the democracy of which Jefferson was the apostle and to abhor the federation of which Hamilton was the exponent. While I had been dazzled with the brilliancy of Jackson's administration of national affairs, I early had sense enough to see that it conflicted, in a very considerable degree, with the teachings of Jefferson. I may as well state here as anywhere the conclusions to which I have been brought by a lifetime of the closest study and connection with na-tional and state affairs and practical policies. This country is to continue certainly for years in accordance with the theories of Hamilton, whose great genius and clear reasoning for-mulated a system of government, while the philosophical lucubrations of Jefferson are the best instructions as to the mutual rela-tions of its citizens in all conditions of life." tions of its citizens in all conditions of life."

General Butler's relations to Jefferson Davis have excited as much critical comment, perhaps, as any other feature of his public life. But his explanation of the reasons why he voted for Davis in the Charleston convention in 1860 serves to put that criticism in a new light. He says:

"many The " " " " " war Davis had showed the surgent of the prosperity and growth of the northwest is due. We owe to the surveys and explorations the Pacific railroad, which was built to bind the east road, which was built to bind the east and west together with a chain of steel. While he was secretary of war he made a tour through the New England states. In a part of this trip I accompanied him and I then had occasion to learn his character and ability. He was not an original distunionist, but felt bound to follow his state. He himself told me this in December, 1860. "For these reasons I voted for him seven times and then the convention adjourned without any break in the votes. Near the beginning of the voting when Douglas was within one vote of a majority, one of Douglas' friends came across the hall to our del and said: "Who here is voting for Jeff Davis!

A vote for Douglas, which will give him a majority, is worth $25,000." I said to him: Sir, it takes two of us here to carry a vote as you know. Here is my colleague voting, Sir, it takes two of us here to carry a vote as you know. Here is my colleague voting, Mr. Chapin. He is worth a couple of millions or more. Perhaps you can prevail upon him, if you would like to try.' That conversation went no further. For these votes for Jefferson Davis I have been criticised in every form of words that characterizes calumny. form of words that characterizes calumny. Yet up to the time of my voting for him, the only secession by the representatives of any state was that of the delegation of South Carolina, when it withdrew from the democratic convention. For aught that anybody in the world knew Davis was still loyal to the union. As a loyal union soldier he had been rewarded by a seat in the cabinet of President Pierre as secretary of war. Thus President Pierce as secretary of war. This post he had filled with commerciation and had then taken a seat in the senate." General Butler gives his opinion of the three greatest American lawyers and he places at the head the name of Jeremiah Mason. Webster and Choate he cites next.

Such was the greeting of Colonel Al. Fairprother to friends and acquaintances who met him by chance and otherwise at his room in the Paxton yesterday. Here was spread out a variety of natural and manufactured tobacco that would enthuse the most indolent devotee of the weed. Tar heel plug as well as the blonde article was scattered about in as the blonds article was scattered about in slabs just the size to fan the small boy. Cut plug, chewing and smoking tobacco, cipa-retts and snuffs, made up in packages of va-rious sizes and shapes were displayed in abundance, and the fortunate participants in the smokers soirce helped themselves liber-

Celonel Fairbrother brought about 200 pounds, of tobacco from his home city, Durham, N. C. Few cities of equal size has been as thoroughly advertised as Durham. Every smoker is familiar with the name. From Alaska to Patagonia and from London to Pekin, the products of the Durham's mills carry comfort to countless millions, learned and differente. It solaces the madds of the Soudan and rivals New England rum as the advance agent of civilization on the plains and forest of the dark continent.

Durham is one of the vigorous young cities of the new south. It has a population of 14,000, and every man, woman and child are live, active people, who know and appreciate the awakening enterprises and keep abreast Colonel Fairbrother brought about 200 he awakening enterprises and keep abreast of the march of industry. The city has its millionaires who energetically spread its millionaires who energetically spread its fame and lavishty dispense the golden fruit of enterprise. Among these people Mr. Fairbrother pitched his journalistic tent ten months ago, purchased an evening paper then afflicted with a paucity of brains and vitality, infused new blood in its veins and restored it to life and activity. That the venture was a profitable one is attested under seal, "The Daily Globe is a hummer with horns. It gives the news when news is news."

The colonel will visit his old home in Tecumsch for a few days, and then return to the harness in Durham.

The New Keystone Express of the Pennsylvania Lines.

Those who have to travel will apreciate the fact that the management f the Pennsylvania line anticipates business necessities, and improves its facilities for moving passengers comfortably and expeditiously, somewhat in advance of the actual demand. This suggestion is verified by the inauguration of a new passenger train service between Chicago and New York to be known as "The Keystone Express," which leaves Chicago at 10:45 o'clock in the morning and reaches New York the next day at 2 o'clock, over the Pennsylvania lines---a little shorter time we believe than has yet been attempted by any of their competitors.
We are told that this train will have the celebrated Pullman vestibules from front to rear and will also carry Mr. Pullman's finest cars. Excepting in special features, it is said that it will be equal to the famous Pennsylvania limited, and while no extra fare will be charged, passengers holding other than first class tickets will not be allowed to ride on it. The venture may seem to be premature, but we predict that the business of The Keystone express will grow with that of the country, and at no distant day we believe it will have become one of the most popular and best paying trains of the enterprising Pennsylvania company, whose management furnishes this new evidence of a determination to excel in all that pertains to the transportation of passengers.

BULLARD USED FORCE. Row Over the Possession of a Hardware Store.

Lawyer Andrew Bevins was in police court this morning after a warrant for the arrest of Fred W. Bullard, who formerly run a hardware store at the corner of Thirteenth and Williams streets.

Mr. Bevins' charge was that Bullard had assaulted and robled him, and a warrant for Bullard's arrest on that charge was issued. Bullard has been having a high time lately and was disposing of his worldly wealth at such an alarming rate that his wife, who owned both the store and the stock of goods, executed a lease of both to Mr. Bevins and wanted him to clear out the Bullard objected. For several days he stood guard over the place and refused to allow Bevins to enter the store. He was finally pacified however and yielded posses-sion on Saturday.

Mr. Bevins took charge of the place and with a constable was busy all day taking an invoice of the stock. He was just leaving the store on Saturday night when Bullard and a companion entered and Bullard de-manded the key to the store. Mr. Bevins refused to give up the key, whereupon Buliars assaulted him and held him up in one hand and took the key with the other.

Adjourned Another Week. The special committee of the city council met yesterday afternoon to continue the investigation of the charges preferred against Deputy License Inspector Frank Riley. The meeting was called for 2 o'clock but it was an hour later before a member of the committee put in an appearance. When they did arrive they were alone, as none of the witnesses for the prosecution had been sub-poenced. Chairman Cooper of the committee stated that the witnesses had promised to attend. Councilman Olson said the sergeant-at-arms should see that the witnesses attended. Councilman Osthoff explained that the sergeant-at-arms is a very busy man, and has ot time to find the witness.

Inspector Riley offered to admit what the witnesses would swear to, but the councilmen would not have it that way, and the investigation was adjourned one week.

"Excuse, me, George, but when I saw you a year ago your face was covered with pimples; it seems to be all right now." "Yes, sir, that's because I stuck to Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the greatest blood medicine in the world. I was never so well as I am now."

Notice to Liquor and Cigar Dealers The entire stock of wines, liquors and cigars of William Darst is now offered for sale at invoice price for cash. Goods will be sold in any quantity, and pro-posals for the purchase of the entire stock will be considered.

JACOB DARST, by John C. Barnard Ligadianes License Inspector Riley is of the opinion that the passage of the ordinance licensing coal dealers will be a source of considerable revenue to the city. He states that thirty-eight of the retailers now stand ready to pay their money into the city treasury, and that the other principal dealers will pay up during the week. The ordinance goes into effect July 1, and provides that each dealer shall pay a license of $100.
