Bibblish of a New Organization About to Be Set on Its Feet.

PATRIOTIC PROTECTION IS PROPOSED.

Omaha Manufacturers and Merchants Meet to Arrange to Further the City's Material Prosperity.

In response to the published call for a manufacturers' meeting...

And even at that figure the number was but a slight indication of the interest or enthusiasm manifested.

Four scores of the manufacturing establishments of the city were represented...

Mr. Trostler thought it advisable to draft resolutions and proceed to organize in a business like manner.

Mr. Trostler suggested that the names of the firms present and then have a committee of five on which that number of different industries would be represented.

Mr. Davis was in favor of deferring any such action until a later date when the members would be better able to tell just what it was advisable to do.

Mr. Trostler did not take kindly to the idea and thought it should be excited by an association of manufacturers.

Mr. Davis agreed with those who wanted to take in the outside and all they could get then, the more the better.

Mr. Trostler thought it would be well to include the business men of the state in the organization.

Mr. Davis was in favor of allowing a number of men who were not manufacturers to join the association.
