A MEMORY-SPUR THAT OFTEN FAILS One Man Transfers His Ring-Another De-

New York Tribune: "I hope you won't forget that," said one friend to another. referring to a commission which the second was to execute. "Oh, no," said the other; "don't have any fear about it. remarked No. 1, "I thought there would be no harm in a gentle reminder. "But a memorandum is better than a reminder," answered No. 2, with a smile. "Oh, that's all right," said No. 1. guess that is a good habit. Now, do you know that I have a method of remem-bering things which I don't want to forget, but the trouble is that it doesn't always work."

"What is that?" inquired No. 2. "Do you see this ring?" pointing to a plain gold band on the little finger of the loft hand.

A nod was the answer. "Well, you see, I habitually wear it on my left hand, but when there is any special thing that I wish to remember as, for instance, some errand that my wife has asked me to do on my way down town-it is my custom to take the ring off and put it on the corresponding finger of the other hand. Now doesn't that strike you as an exceedingly simple method of bracing and fortifying one's memory? I used to think so, I don't now as much as I did. For oftentimes now I have a whole world of trouble in trying to remember what it is that I want to remember. It isn't always that way, but it is sometimes. Of course the unaccustomed feeling of the ring on the wrong finger reminds me that there is something on my mind, and so on some occasions the burden becomes positively heavy. I have worn that ring on my right hand for two or three days at a time, now and then, vexing my brain all the time to find what I may perhaps term the missing link. It's no fun, I assure you.

Your experience is very interesting," said No. 2. "I have never adopted any any such method as you describe, though l often consider myself blessed---or the other thing-with what Mr. Beecher used to call a 'good forgettery. The only safe rule with me is to make a note of what I wish to keep in mind, and then as I frequently refer to my notebook i usually manage to get along without any bad blunders. I never had much faith in the methods of improving the memory which various professors give instructions in, though, not having actually tried them, I may not do them full justice. The fact is that my memory used to be a good deal better than it is now. When I was in college I had an Al memory. It was the wonder of all my classmates. I took more prizes than anybody else had ever done up to that time, largely because I could cram easily and remember all that the books contained. Then, when I went into the prize examinations, it was easy work for ne to write out the answers to all questions. But my business after leaving college has been such that it has been necessary for me each day to deal with an entirely new set of facts, and a large number of them. Each day's accumulaion was shoved aside by the following day's and thus the mind, or the memory, if you please, lost its grip, as it were As this went on for years, my memory became permanently impaired, and have no hope of ever recovering it. It is only important matters that I can now keep in mind, or else matters that have a special personal interest. For details I have no capacity of retention for more than a few days. And, as I said, when there is any special thing that I must attend to outside of the regular course of business I make use of my memorandum-book." Syrup; for it now only takes 25 cents to cure

One on the Doctor. One of the Chicago Young Mon's Christian association officials recently had a touch of the grip which prostrated him for the first time in his life, says the Mail. The nearest physician was summoned and began the treatment without knowing who or what his patient was. "No whisky," he remarked, emphati-"I never prescribe alcohol in any orm for the grip. Just follow my direct tions implicitly and you'll pull through all right in a few days. In the meantime must ask you to be very abstemious. From this point until you are yourself again I can give you but three cigars a lay-say one after each meal." After a hard siege the patient finally became convalescent and one day when the doctor called he found the young man dressed and sitting in an easy

"Ah, this is better, decidedly better," cheerily exclaimed the physician. "Now then, all we have before us is to build up your shattered system. You'll soon pull yourself together again." "I sincerely hope so, doctor," wearily replied the invalid. "I've had a pretty rough time of it and I'm played out. Those cigars have nearly killed me but followed your instructions to the letphysician with a puzzled look. "Well, I never smoked a cigar in my life before I was knocked out by the grip and it was terribly hard to learn to smoke under such circumstances, but I

Review. Next to yellow, green diamonds are the most numerous; the blue are very rare and not of a bright tint. When the diamond is between brown and black its transparency entirely disappears, or is seen only at the angles. Entirely colorless diamonds come from the mines in India, Brazil, the Cape and Australia, One-fourth of the diamonds are colorless; one-fourth of "pure water," with a stripe or spot color, and the remainder colored.

The colored diamonds preserve their luster and clearness best when they are cut; especially the beautiful yellow ones, which by candie light almost surpass in brilliancy the diamonds of pure water. Diamonds can be grouped according to the shades of color.

The diamond is a nonconductor of electricity, and this is the more strange as graphite and charcoal, substances absolutely identical with it chemically, are very good conductors. By friction, however, both in the rough and polished state, it becomes positively electric, but loses its electricity completely in the course of half an hour. Chemically the diamond consists of pure carbon. Newton concluded the diamond must be a combustible body in consequence of its high refractive power. Robert Boyle, however, strove n vain to consume it in the crucible. For the purpose of investigating this supposed combustibility the academy of Cimento at Florence, in the year 1694, induced by the Grand Duke Cosimo III., fixed a diamond in the focus of a large burning-glass. The academicians found that it cracked, coruscated, and at length disappeared without leaving a particle behind.

Realistic Stage Weeping. "There never was an actress who could command her lachrymal glands as Adelaide Neilson," said handsome Jack Barnes of Jefferson's company to a reporter of the Chicago Post.

"I was her leading man at one time," continued Jack, "and I learned her peculiar faculty in this way to my cost. that time I rather fancied myself, don't you know, in such parts as Romeo and the like, and I went to considerable expense in dressing.
"For Romeo I had some lovely dresses, all silk, satin and lace, and of the most delicate 'evening shades,' as the ladies say. A delicate pale blue jacket was my favorite in one of the scenes between Romeo and Juliet, and I was awfully sorry I had it before the season was over. "After a few performances I noticed that the beautiful pale blue silk on the front of my costume was stained in some way. There were long streaks I could not account for. "That night Neilson and I were in one of the pathetic love scenes of 'Romeo and Juliet.' Her head rested on my face to the audience a moment, which at once burst into tumultuous applause, When she turned her face toward mine again I saw the tears streaming down her cheeks. "I glanced at my costume and saw the cause of the stains. Here were several fresh, wet streaks on the handsome pale blue silk made by Juliet's tears. I tried to hold her head away from me, but costumes had to be sacrificed to art, and when the season was over my costume

D. F. DUDLEY. Diamonds in Their Humps. There is a belief among many people that if you quietly rub with the palm of your hand the protuberance of a hunchback luck will follow you all the week. Special Inspector Donohue, of the customs service, says the New York Telegram, thought of this as he stood on the deck of the steamship La Bretagne and saw two of the cabin passengers descending the gang plank, each with a little glide over the back of one of the pas-sengers. He felt a metallic "jingle" and knew his luck had come with surprising quickness. He requested the men to step into the examination room and found upon them a large quantity of smuggled jewelry. On one, who gave his name as Mr Pardine, was found one pair diamond earrings, three diamond rings, one pair Colds and coughs have been so prevalent Coids and coughs have been so prevalent during the past few months that the experience of Albert Favorite of Arkansas City, Kan., cannot fall to interest some of our readers. Here it is in his own words: "I contracted a cold early last spring that settled on my lungs and had hardly recovered from it when I caught another that hung on all summer and left me with a backing cough which I thought I never would get rid of. I had used Chamberlain's cough remedy some fourteen years ago with much success and fourteen years ago with much success and concluded to try it again.
