Plans for the Relief and Protection of Homeless Boys and Girls.

COL. HOAGLAND'S EMPLOYMENT PLAN

An Appeal for Help for the Helpless—Earnest Friends of the Unfortunate Counsel on Plans for United Action.

Boys will be boys and girls will be girls, but there are many who are not just the kind of boys and girls that they should be, and for that reason Colonel Hoagland, the newsboys' friend, is endeavoring to establish in Omaha a division of the Boys and Girls' National Home and Employment Association of the United States and Dominion of Canada.

The colonel has been in this city several days and has interested in his work the charity inclined people to such an extent that a district convention is now being held at the Kountze Memorial church. The convention opened yesterday morning at half past 9 o'clock.

Dr. J. T. Duryea was to have called the convention to order, but he was tardy on account of being under the impression that the meeting was to be held at the Young Men's Christian association rooms. In his stead Dr. W. H. Keane was made chairman and H. E. Dawes secretary.

The object of the Association is to obtain homes and employment for all homeless children, especially truant, tramping and neglected boys and girls, and to place intelligence offices at the county seats and in cities and large towns, in every state and territory, and to obtain a committee of children in homes and to report; to provide a home with a farm and industrial employment in the vicinity of large towns, to which all truant and neglected boys and girls less than 16 years of age, first, for personal cleansing, and second, for instruction in agricultural and mechanical trades, and to prevent the imprisoning of children and youth in jails and workhouses, with older and hardened criminals; to obtain the enactment of uniform laws in all states to carry out these objects, such as granting power to detain tramping children and youth; for compulsory education of all children of children of drunken and vicious parents, etc. These objects are to be accomplished through state and local boards organized in all large towns, and through a committee in each state, territory, and Canada, to organize and supervise the work in their respective localities.

Colonel Hoagland's Story.

After the convention was opened by scriptural reading and prayer by Dr. Keane, Colonel Hoagland made a statement of what he had done for the newsboys and girl bootblacks. He began by telling of his work in Louisville. Through an editorial writer on the Courier-Journal he first came in contact with the boys. The next morning he himself started a night school, the paper furnishing the first $100. The "tramp" boys who were homeless were put in the school and none were hunted for them. The scheme was a success.

"The best way to help a boy," said the colonel, "is to help him to help himself. No business man wanting a boy will take kindly to him if the boy is dirty and looks like a tramp. Clean him up; get the dirt off him and if he looks bright most any man will place a place for that kind of a boy if you go around and try to get him employment. Ten years ago I was urged to establish an establishment for the street waifs. I have been in 304 cities and 3,000 manufacturing securing employment for boys. I have paid my expenses by selling my work."

"Before a boy is taken around to get work he should have about a week's outing in order to get him clean and to get him out of any trouble in finding a place for him. Somebody has got to see to it."

"A destitute boy is roaming at large and is caught in a blizzard and perishes, the newspapers and all of us will merely say that an unknown boy was found dead. But let a foreigner know that a man and a boy and deprive him of his liberty and you will see how quickly that an army is sent to that foreign country to get him."

Mayor Bemis' Welcome.

The address of welcome was then delivered by Mayor Bemis.

"It is customary for an official in my capacity to welcome you and it is a pleasure to do so. I am very glad to welcome you as an organization in behalf of 150,000 people and our city. Though I have not taken an active part in such work I am heart and soul with you and feel that you should have a deep interest in such a reform. A home of refuge for boys and girls is needed. I am sure that you are the best of the world; a nobility that is lending its time and money to rescue the boys and girls. I wish you success and will do my part."

A. J. Sawyer of Lincoln, president of the state division of the association, was to have responded to the address of welcome, but it was announced that Dr. J. T. Duryea would perform that part of the exercises. He said the most pressing need for the boys and girls' home was in the centers of trade and commerce. The largest number of boys and girls were there to be found without protection. There they had more temptations and were without the supervision of their parents. The most considerate and careful system should be devised as to the serious and vast needs of the waifs. If there was human want it became the duty of our Christian to supply that want if one could do it. He then spoke of the method and the means and the end of the work. It was simple enough for one to supply a need to another, but when there were multitudes to supply, it required organization. A body is formed. Each man knows his own part and what much is accomplished.

The doctor then related a story of Tracy, who founded a home for the boys and girls in Nassau street, New York. "The way to begin," said he, "is to begin; begin now, if it is nothing more than having a heart."

He then told how St. Luke's hospital was started in a little house in New York city, and showed how it had grown to a great institution.

Some of the Discussions.

"Should boys better be imprisoned or given a few days in which to leave town for larceny, tramping or petty offenses?" was a subject discussed by Rev. S. M. Ware and Rev. Samuel Williams. The former stated that all persons, whether Christians or not, should take the boys and girls who had sold themselves and was greatly interested in it.

"The subject," said Mr. Williams, "reminds me of which of the two evils shall we resort to. I think we should resort to neither of them. If the boy is required to leave town he is thrust upon some other community and neither are benefited. If he is imprisoned his pride and self respect is broken. Then again the boy is associated with other criminals and learns vice that he would not on the outside of a prison cell."

He then spoke of the deplorable homes from which children left on account of abuse, also driven from home. He thought such an organization as proposed should be established, and if effected he knew of a man who would furnish the money for it.

Rev. Samuel Williams of Lincoln said the work of reform in this direction was more necessary than were the buildings at present.

Rev. C. W. Savidge, in speaking of imprisonment, said it should not be done. Something should be done for the street waifs.

Mrs. King of Lincoln thought it would be wise to establish an industrial school, to be presided over by a matron. She thought by giving them a little work their minds would be employed and they would keep out of mischief.

Mrs. Todd of Lincoln, spoke for the girls, and gave her experience with one who had adopted. She said there were many tramping girls that should have as much attention as the boys.

Mrs. Clark of the Open Door stated that ten acres of ground was ready for a home whenever the organization was effected.

Mrs. Schultz of Missouri Valley, said she had been interested in the work for boys and girls for the last fifteen years, and was heartily in favor of the movement. She said the boys and girls were worse savages. What is the best plan for providing against boys and girls becoming tramps? was to have been discussed by Chief of Police Levey, E. A. Malachuk of Kearney, and H. E. Dawes of the Lincoln reform school.

Mr. Dawes was the only one of the three present. He gave his experience with boys in the reformatory, and said any plan to save the boys was good. It was not always necessary the best, but he believed in any plan that would do them good.

Miss Bertha Moore of the People's church talked of the demoralizing effects of the use of tobacco and thought the use of it should be discontinued. Her use made an appetite for liquor.

How to Keep Them Honest.

"What is the best plan to prevent gambling among street boys?" was the subject taken up at the afternoon session by Mrs. Dr. Sweetland. She said the first thing was how to prevent boys from being on the street. No class of people, she thought, had so little respect for the law as the boys. If mothers do not love their boys and have not time to devote to them they should not have charge of households. Generally was universal and as long as there were boys there would be gambling. It should not be so, she said. The newsboys should have a home to go to after they had sold their papers. Then they would not put in their leisure time in gambling in the streets. The reformation should be made to grow up people who will take interest in the boys.

The home should be made attractive. Many good homes send boys to the street because they are not properly cared for. Every child should have a home. It should be made so that they would not be found on the streets.

The next topic for discussion was "Plans most practical for assisting widows and families of mechanics and others in procuring employment." Generally was universal and as long as there were boys there would be gambling. It should not be so, she said. The newsboys should have a home to go to after they had sold their papers. Then they would not put in their leisure time in gambling in the streets. The reformation should be made to grow up people who will take interest in the boys.

How to Get Them Homes.

Plans for securing homes for orphans and destitute children generally was universal and as long as there were boys there would be gambling. It should not be so, she said. The newsboys should have a home to go to after they had sold their papers. Then they would not put in their leisure time in gambling in the streets. HAFFAIRS AT SOUTH OMAHA

Ham of the Busy Spring Time Comes Close on the Stillness of Winter.

RUSHING WORK ON THE IMPROVEMENTS

Many Men Employed on the New Swift and Cudahy Buildings—Plans of the Metropolitan Street Railway—Notes and Personal.

Although the march winds are still blowing and the snow comes drifting down at odd intervals the Magic City has already begun to prepare for the development of another year. The improvements which were only decided on a few weeks ago are already in process of construction. This is only another illustration of the push and enterprise which has always been characteristic of South Omaha.

The huge cigar structure which is to be added to the plant of Swift & Co. is well under way. The foundations are all in and the brick outside walls are raised nearly to the second story. The work is being pushed with the greatest possible speed. A large force of bricklayers swarmed over the work and the walls are rising perceptibly higher every day. At one side a gang of carpenters is busily engaged in framing the beams and braces which are to constitute the interior economy of the building. The machinery has been ordered and will be ready as soon as the building is in condition to receive it. The company expects to have at least a part of the building ready for use by May 1.

At the Cudahy plant the same activity prevailed. The improvements contemplated by that company are too extensive and complicated to be entirely completed this spring, but it is expected that the most important buildings will be completed in a couple of months.

A gang of the Metropolitan Street Railway company's men was at work at N street and Broadway yesterday. The excavations were deepened and the street was widened. The work was stopped by injunction, they tore up the pavement as far as Twenty-fifth street, and prepared it for the new street. Enough ties will be drawn today to lay both tracks for one block and the iron will be laid on them tomorrow. The force of men engaged in the work were to push the work as rapidly as possible, but the weather will have something to do with the completion of the line. A gang of men will do the work on the Omaha end of the line, and the company expects to be able to construct the road as fast as the material can be obtained.
