Germany's People Find Their Paths Leading Toward Grave Questions. The truth lies somewhere midway between optimism and pessimism. While the situation is disquieting it has not yet become so dangerous. That the prestige and potency of the existing system in Prussia have been affected by the events of the last few weeks is unquestionable, but we are not on the brink of a political catastrophe.

Some Very Disquieting Symptoms. Lastly, perhaps chiefly, it is impossible not to be struck by the amazing change which has come over the talk and bearing of Berliners of all classes, as shown by the irreverence with which they treat their rulers, by the satirical political pamphlets and the scurrilous speeches of their sovereign, by the boldness with which even in the Reichstag men like Liebknecht and Bebel now express their views and aspirations.

GREAT DAMAGE IN NUCKOLLS COUNTY

First Reports of the Work of the Cyclone Underestimated the Situation—Heavy Hails Add Additional Inconvenience in that Vicinity.

Nelson, Neb., April 3.—[Special Telegram to THE BEE.]—Work of repairing the damage done by the storm is being pushed steadily ahead. All day the usual Sabbath stillness has been broken by the sound of hammer and saw, as busy mechanics framed the timbers and nailed the boards which are to replace the ruined structures.

It is now transpires that the damage inflicted in the country around Nelson was far more severe than was reported. Not even an approximate estimate of the loss can be made now, but the additional accounts of the storm's work continually coming in make it safe to say that thousands of dollars' worth of property in Nuckolls county is wrecked beyond repair.

Today an excursion train was run up from Superior and brought some 400 sightseers, who spent several hours in wandering among the ruins and gathering bits of the wreck to serve as mementoes of the terrible storm of last Thursday night. The wounded are all doing well.
