

MANY CHILDREN INJURED

Business Portion of McCook Devastated by a Cyclone.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH DESTROYED

Fifty Little Ones Caught in the Debris and Dangerously Hurt—Heroic Deeds of Nine-Year-Old Dan McAlpine—List of the Victims.

McCook, Neb., June 4.—[Special Telegram to THE BEE.]—McCook was visited today with a terrible cyclone. Considerable damage was done and a number of people seriously injured. It had been a nice day, clear and bright, with the wind blowing from the southwest. About 3 o'clock in the afternoon it clouded up. In the next afternoon there was no perceptible change in the temperature. At 4:15 p. m., without a moment's warning, a small, whitish cloud was seen approaching from the east. It passed over the city and crossed the Republican river, where it turned and came back over the city from southwest to northeast. At that time the streets were crowded with people and many farmers were getting ready to go home after a day's shopping. As the huge funnel shaped cloud passed over the E. & M. shops and roundhouse it seemed to suddenly drop down to the ground, first striking the business building owned by H. W. Cole and with its awful power raised the metal roof clear off of the one-story part in the rear, whirling it around, and then it drove with terrific force into almost its former position upon the heads of the cigarmakers who were at work there. All escaped except one who received several cuts on the head. The thick brick walls alone saved them from most serious injury. This building is occupied by Joseph Reizenstein as a cigar factory and his damage to stock is not very great.

Alarmed the Citizens. By this time the streets were thronged by terrified occupants of the buildings who hastily rushed out of their various places of business. The storm center seemed to raise up in the air and again drop to the ground about three blocks away. In a moment the thick wall of driving timbers and the cry was raised that the Congregational church was in ruins and hundreds of children buried in the ruins. Some one had presence of mind enough to turn in a general alarm, and the fire department responded nobly. Amid the screeching of whistles of the engines in the railroad yards amid the din of the bells as they crowded round towards the fallen edifice.

The children of the city were rushing for children's day at the Congregational church and that edifice was packed to its utmost capacity with the little folks. But two minutes before the cyclone struck the building about 300 of the smaller children had finished their exercises and had just gone home. The church was raised from its foundations as lightly as if it had been an egg shell and then crashed down with a dull thud like the boom of a cannon in one mass of flying timbers about sixty children were gathered with the pastor of the church and several teachers. The children who had first left the building ran screaming with terror to their homes, many were hurt by flying timbers, but so far as known none seriously.

Several of the falling timbers were removed from the ruins and it was scarcely thought that any would be got out alive. All Released from the Debris. The work progressed rapidly, men working with their axes that damaged the rafters, and soon all were released from their imprisonment. The timbers, in falling, had formed an arch over the heads of those who were in the building and many were uninjured. None of the injured have died. Seven of the children are seriously injured, and it is feared that several cannot live but a few days.

Maud Perry, Dan McAlpine, Harry Casper, Ruth Cresswell and her little sister are among the seriously injured. Maud and Laura McMillan were badly bruised about the head and back and the pastor, Rev. J. W. G. Smith, was injured, being buried under the church organ, and it is feared he is hurt internally. Dan McAlpine, although a lad of some 8 or 9 years, was one of the heroes of the hour. Although seriously injured, he was pulling away the rubbish and helping others out when the people reached the ruins, and he fell over and he was badly cut and is now lying in a critical condition.

Another little boy was caught up by the wind and carried safely on the rafters, and set down on the ground some distance away, more scared than hurt. Maud Cresswell has her face badly lacerated and her lower arm broken, and a leg. Others have legs and arms broken, and still others seem to be hurt internally. The list of injured numbers about fifty and as many were carried home at once it is impossible at this hour to get the exact number. Had the cyclone struck the city a few days earlier at least 350 would have been buried in the ruins.

TIME FOR BUSINESS. Energetic Work is Needed to Put the Project in successful operation. GRAND ISLAND, Neb., June 3.—[To the Editor of THE BEE:] Permit me to most heartily thank you for your timely and appropriate editorial on the subject of the Nebraska exhibit at the World's fair appearing in your issue of Thursday of this week. The commission fully realizes the necessity for energetic work from this time henceforth, and it is deeply regretted the fact that the exhibition was not sufficiently large to warrant continuous and energetic work from the state, but the commission will do its best to see that the Nebraska exhibit is as complete as possible, and that as late as possible work may be done or whole articles added and the state disgraced in the eyes of the nation. The decision has been in favor of an energetic and persistent work as possible upon a systematic plan, and the commission is confident that the amount of money expended, and I feel confident there will be no reasonable grounds for complaint of any lack of energy in promoting the interests of the exhibit in the future.

Commissioner General Garneau has appointed subcommittees for the various departments and has put them to work in their respective lines, and each superintendent appointed is acknowledged to be a man thoroughly competent and enthusiastically energetic, peculiar fitness having been the sole aim in making the selection, and it is entirely safe to say that they will do good work and render most valuable assistance to the commissioners and commission in general, and insure an exhibit from this state which will not only be a source of just pride in every loyal citizen of the state, but also the means of vast improvement in the way of the material development of Nebraska.

It is indeed the opportunity of a lifetime, and with the hearty interest and co-operation of the people and such assistance as is afforded by the state, it is believed that the advantage of the opportunity and enjoy the benefits of our world's fair. It is a great opportunity in the way of soil, water, and cheap lands, certain to be profitable in a very short time. Development in all lines, and a proper exhibit at the World's fair will do more than any other single thing to hasten development. The commission is in deep earnest to win every paper in this state and every loyal citizen of this state to lend hearty help in putting Nebraska to the front, and with that help there can be no such thing as failure. SEB P. MOBLEY.

Alleged Burglars Captured. NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., June 4.—[Special Telegram to THE BEE.]—Henry Castle and a young man named McDonald were arrested today charged with robbing Strobbe's dry goods store at Brownville, and will be held for arraignment.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., June 4.—[Special Telegram to THE BEE.]—The bank statement for the month of May has been received and shows a decrease of $200,000 and specie has increased $100,000. The banks now hold $2,574,000 in excess of requirements.

The earl and countess of Meath leave by the Burlington this afternoon on their journey homeward to England.

Bank Statement. NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., June 4.—[Special Telegram to THE BEE.]—The bank statement for the month of May has been received and shows a decrease of $200,000 and specie has increased $100,000. The banks now hold $2,574,000 in excess of requirements.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., June 4.—[Special Telegram to THE BEE.]—The bank statement for the month of May has been received and shows a decrease of $200,000 and specie has increased $100,000. The banks now hold $2,574,000 in excess of requirements.

PLATTE VALLEY BANK CLOSED

One of the Oldest Institutions in the State in Trouble.

CENTRAL CITY, Neb., June 4.—[Special Telegram to THE BEE.]—This community was electrified this afternoon by the closing of the doors of the Platte Valley bank. Mr. D. Martin is the president and S. B. Storrett cashier. It was supposed to be one of the solid banks of the state. It is alleged that the cashier has been trying to bear down on the Chicago Board of Trade, but bad weather has been against him and it is said that he has sunk all his hard and close to $50,000 of the bank's money besides.

The bank examiner has been telegraphed for and it will be impossible to give any information as to the condition of the bank until he comes, and makes an examination. Mr. Martin is considered early for outlining the program in particular, out some special features were considered and will be worked for. Among these will be at least two balloon ascensions and parachute descensions. A committee also appointed to provide a flambeau club as a special feature and a committee was appointed to see that seating capacity will be provided about the speakers stand. The committee adjourned to Saturday evening, June 25.

GRAND ISLAND, Neb., June 4.—[Special Telegram to THE BEE.]—At a meeting of the reunion committee tonight there were present Chairman S. P. Moolay, Secretary George Caldwell, C. F. Bentley, Harry Harrison, George F. Ryan, George Dean of this city and J. H. Meagher of Columbus. It is considered early for outlining the program in particular, out some special features were considered and will be worked for. Among these will be at least two balloon ascensions and parachute descensions. A committee also appointed to provide a flambeau club as a special feature and a committee was appointed to see that seating capacity will be provided about the speakers stand. The committee adjourned to Saturday evening, June 25.

INJURED IN A RUNAWAY

WEEPING WAGON, Neb., June 4.—[Special Telegram to THE BEE.]—While W. H. Kirkendall and family were out driving this afternoon in a cart the horses became unmanageable and tipped the vehicle over, throwing them out. Mrs. Kirkendall was seriously if not fatally injured. She struck on her head and ribs, and lost her consciousness. The child was thrown in the mud a few yards, from the parents and escaped injury.

TROOPS FOR WYOMING

FORT ROBINSON, Neb., June 3.—[Special Telegram to THE BEE.]—Workmen engaged on the Ninth cavalry station here are under orders to hold themselves in readiness for a moment's notice. Major Isley, Ninth cavalry, goes in command, the objective point being the crossing of the Powder river in Wyoming.

DISCOVERED A GHOSTLY RELIC

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., June 4.—[Special Telegram to THE BEE.]—Workmen engaged in grading for the B. & M. in the southeast part of the city yesterday unearthed the skeleton of a woman. The remains were found at a depth of sixteen feet, apparently in the bottom of a well, and were in a fair state of preservation.

CLOSED AN INTERESTING SESSION

HASTINGS, Neb., June 4.—[Special Telegram to THE BEE.]—The South Central Baptist Young People's union closed a very interesting session tonight, which began here yesterday. Delegates from all over the southern and central part of the state of Nebraska were in attendance.

SNOW AND RAIN

FORT ROBINSON, Neb., June 4.—[Special Telegram to THE BEE.]—Rain has been falling the past twenty-four hours interspersed with snow and hail. The rain fall registered at post hospital was three inches, when the gauge overflowed.

CHILL'S CABINET RESIGNS

Political Affairs in That Country Not the Smallest Imaginable.

[Copyrighted 1892 by James Gordon Bennett.] VALPARAISO, Chile (via Galveston Tex.), June 4.—[By Mexican Cable to THE BEE.]—A conference of ministers was held in Santiago yesterday. Some members of the cabinet wished to retain their offices until after congress had made some move, but it was finally decided to present their resignations to the president. It is thought that a new cabinet will be formed by a coalition of both parties.

The project for increasing taxation is causing much uneasiness among the commercial and laboring classes. It appears that Minister Montt had been deceived on the strength of his liberal party. A large number of the liberal party is opposing him. The nitrate producers of Iquique have suggested the abolition of the proposed restriction of the output.

General Canot before leaving for Europe says that the object of his visit is purely military. He is expected to visit the military establishments of France, Germany, Austria and other countries en route to Chile.

The Herald correspondent at Montevideo telegraphs that Colonel Herrera, brother of the president, has been arrested and put in prison for writing a violent article against the general.

The Herald correspondent at Buenos Ayres telegraphs that senator Terry has refused to accept the portfolio of the minister of finance.

Bandits are robbing the houses of the people throughout the province.

BULLION EXPORTS

Gold and Silver Exports for the Last Week.

New York, June 4.—The exports of specie from the port of New York last week amounted to $3,358,151, of which $1,947,955 was gold and $1,410,196 silver. Of the total exports $1,500,000 gold and $300,000 silver went to Europe, an $475,000 gold and $8,500 silver went to the West Indies and South America. The imports of specie during the week were $84,395, of which $4,200 was gold and $80,195 silver.

The steamer La Champagne which sailed today took $500,000 gold consigned to Havre, and the steamer Saale took $1,000,000 gold to Bremen.

TAGGART IN JAIL

CHRYSTEN, Wyo., June 4.—[Special Telegram to THE BEE.]—Frank D. Taggart pleaded not guilty to the charge of being an accessory to an attempt to commit murder. He is the attorney who smuggled a six-shooter into the county jail to Klach McKinney. The prosecuting attorney refused to accept a plea of guilty to the charge of assisting a prisoner to escape, which would involve only a light sentence and a fine. Taggart is still in jail, having been unable to post bond.

UMBRELLA TRUST

ALBANY, N. Y., June 4.—What seems to be a combination of umbrella manufacturers was incorporated today under the name of the Umbrella company, with a capital of $5,000,000. The business is to be transacted and centered in all states and territories of the United States and in foreign countries, with principal offices in New York City.

DYNAMITERS' CRUEL DEED

KENNINGTON, Pa., June 4.—Dynamiters early this morning blew up the house of J. K. Turner, a jeweler, killing Turner and Emma Scheffer and seriously injuring Turner's wife and two children. A posse is hunting for the culprits.

BANK STATEMENT

New York, June 4.—The bank statement for the month of May has been received and shows a decrease of $200,000 and specie has increased $100,000. The banks now hold $2,574,000 in excess of requirements.

The earl and countess of Meath leave by the Burlington this afternoon on their journey homeward to England.

ARE GOING OUT OF POLITICS

Many Members of Parliament Will Abandon the Commons for Good.

OTHERS NERVOUS ABOUT RE-ELECTION

Sketches of Several Who Will Go Out from the Present House Never to Return as Members—Hard Work for Little Pay.

[Copyrighted 1892 by James Gordon Bennett.] LONDON, June 4.—[New York Herald Cable—Special to THE BEE.]—Here we have a remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some, tired of the whole business, think it is not good enough to waste more life in it. There is no remarkable list of those who are to be numbered among the "retiring" members of Parliament, at the close of this first week of June, all under suspicion of death. Some of us, perhaps a good many, may be "called back" to the Commons, but the rest will pass through the transition state, receiving judgment through the medium of the ballot box. Some of my friends on both sides of the house will go into the fight depressed and nervous. Some