Henry Ward Beecher once went in search of a brief rest to a small fishing village, where his appearance was apparently unknown, says the Boston Globe. day came around he went to the morning service at the Congregational church and was not a little astonished to hear the preacher for the day, a very young man, rattle off one of his (Beecher's) best sermons as tle off one of his (Beecher's) best sermons as an original discourse. At the conclusion of the service the great preacher waited for a chat with the young man. "Might I ask you how long it took you to compose the sermon you preached to us this morning?" inquired its real author. "Oh, about six or seven hours," was the rejoinder. "You must be a very smart young man," said Beecher, "for it took ine just five days to write that seif-same sermon." After a careful, but unblushing, scrutiny of the great pulpit orator the youth remarked: "I guess pulpit orator the youth remarked: you're Ward Beecher, then!" A you're Ward Beecher, then!" A grave nod was the only response. Then the juvenile apostle put out his band, and, grasping that of his celebrated listener, exclaimed: "Loos here. Mr. Beecher, you just go on writing sermons like that. As long as you do I shall never be ashamed to preach them.

An open-air preacher, addressing a meeting of young men on the subject of "The Prodigal Son," became enthusiastic in showing the depth and persistence of paternal love and finally shouted: "Brethren, I beyears, awaiting the return of his son!"

RURAL REMINDERS FOR AUGUST.

By D. D. T. Moore.

the farmer has an opportunity to and should take a much needed rest after the arduous labors of midsummer. While most ruralists have abundant time for reading, study, attending meetings and visiting in winter, very few contrive to get away from severe and monotonous farm labor, for even a brief period of diversion, from the opening of spring until the fall crops are harvested. The result is that the hard and continuous field work to which they are subjected, especially during the extreme hot weather of summer, exhausts their systems and ofted causes tasting injury to health and constitution. Such a course is wrong, for all work and no play or recreation not only makes the farmer dull, but frequently proves permanently detrimental to his health and consequent prosperity in the future. Therefore, after long months of almost constant toil, the wearred husbandman should take advantage of the comparatively leisure month of August to secure a good vacation. It is a good time for the farmer and his wife to visit friends at a distance, go to the seashore or mountains, or make other excursions. And a little later he should attend the county or state fair with as many of his family as convenient, and certainly if he fails to obtain any respite from his labors this month, the fair season ought to be made one of pleasant recreation and instruction. Prepare for the Fairs.

The agricultural fairs are soon to be held, most of them occurring in September, and now is the time for all progressive farmers, horticulturists and stockmen to make active preparations to become exhibitors, as well as spectators, at one or more of them. Be sure and contribute something to your local or county fair and then give your attention to as many others as may be expedient. Prepare in advance for showing whatever you propose to present in the best possible condition, and if you intend to exhibit at a state or other large fair, remember that the entry books of many prominent societies close early; therefore do not neglect to obtain copies of rules and regulations and make your entries in due season in order that there may be no failure for lack of readiness. Where entry books are closed some days or weeks in advance of the opening of the exhibition (as is the case with most large fairs) competitors should be prompt if they would be assured of favorable opportunity to win premiums and add to their reputations. The only proper course to be pursued by all those intending to show anything at one or more fairs the coming autumn, is to put all animals and articles in good condition to exhibit and then see that they are entered at the proper time.

The Corn Crop and Silage. Indian corn, the most important staple yet unsecured, was planted so late in many sections on account of the backward spring, that it is still small enough in some localities to be cultivated and fertilized to advantage. In all such cases the surface soil should be stirred and the weeds killed by running the cultivator between the rows. This will hasten the maturity of the crop, and in some cases save it from frost. But where the grain does not ripen in season the easiest way to save the crop will be to put it into the silo, and it is probable that much late corn will be utilized in this way the coming fall. By building a cheap silo in advance many a corngrower would be prepared for silaging Those who believe in sitage would do well to heed this suggestion. Farmers who feel assured that their corn is too late to escape the frost, will of course provide for such a contingency, this being one of the cases in which it is essential to take time by the forelock.

Oats, Buckwheat and Rye, Oats should be cut before they are fully ripe; they will shell out less and the straw will be more valuable. There the sheaf, believing that it is better for some kinds of stock, while it renders the labor and expense of threshing unnecessary. Buchwheat has been called the lazy farmer's crop, but it is known to be excellent for cleaning land from weeds and grass; therefore on suitable ground can be grown to advantage, and its product will be appreciated in the family during the winter. July is the usual time for sowing buckwheat, but if put in early in August the crop will probably escape the frost, and if it does not, will yet be valuable for plowing under. Rye if sown now on fairly good land will be the means of securing fresh grass for pasturage or soiling in both fall and spring. The seed can be sown from July to November right in the corn field, or on stubble where grass is sown, and yields anywhere from eighteen to forty bushels per acre. In sections where fine horses are numerous rye straw properly threshed can be readily and profitably sold. Turnips and Potatoes.

Turnip sowing should be completed, as a rule, by the middle of August, although there are some varieties that may be put in at any time during the month. It is now a little late to sow the Rutabaga or Swede turnip. which contains more nutriment than other varieties, except on rich and well prepared soil in favorable localities. Strap leaf turnips do best when planted in drills, say twenty inches aport, and if the soi! is poor 150 pounds or more to the acre of superphosphate or bone meal should be used near the seed. Late sown turnips require a richer soil than those put in early. It is better to sow turnips after a rain than just before it. Those sown just before a rain do not need to be covered; but if sown just after it is a good plan to drag a bush over the patch. Potatoes ought to be dug when ripeas soon as the vines stop growingproperly secured or marketed. Do not allow them to be exposed to the sun longer then it is necessary to dry them sufficiently for storing. Those who have many potatoes to harvest should note this point, as a slight exposure even to a diffused light will cause some varieties to become green and unfit for food. The potato crop is becoming more important every year, and al that is now wanted to make it more generally grown is a good potato harvester that will save the grower the great muscular strain in digging to which he is now subjected.

Live stock in pastures have a swelter-ing time of it in August unless they are made comfortable. In the absence of shade it will pay to erect temporary shelter. Cows in full flow if they get overheated—in fact sunstruck—will fall off, and often be nearly useless for the rest of the season. It is very difficult to restore such cows, but careful nursing will be of assistance. Prevention here is better than any amount of cure. Build a shade by setting up forked stakes, placing poles across them and laying on a brush roof. Not only should animals at pasture have shade, but they should be supplied with water. A well is beter than nothing; but if a stream, however small, can be made to afford a constant supply by all means make use of August ushers in a season between it. Often a spring, at no great distance, may be thus utilized at a cost of little grain gathering and the time for securlabor and less money. As the pastures fail give cows plenty of fodder corn, cut ing late crops and fall seeding, in which short and sprinkled with two to four quarts of corn meal for each cow daily. This will help carry them through the trying season. Work horses turned out to pasture at night should also be given their usual grain feed. They should receive extra chre now. Give them a long rest at noon, and don't neglect frequent watering and proper grooming. Wean the lambs and give them daily a handful of mixed bran and oil cake. Smear tho noses of the sheep with tar to keep off the gaddy. Now is the time to pen up store pigs for fattening, for a pound of corn in August or September will make as much pork as two pounds in cold weather. Keep the poultry houses clean taking precautions against all vermin.

Orchard and Fruit Garden. The orchard and fruit garden are profitable adjuncts to many farms, and should not be neglected at this season. Those who attend to or superintend the picking and marketing know the importance of care in assorting, neatness in packing and promptness in getting their fruit to market in order to secure the best prices. People who neglect these essentials rarely obtain top prices, and hence do not find the bust-ness profitable. Near a market early apples and pears are more profitable than winter varieties, but they should be handled with care, put in small packages or crates, and be honestly packed with good fruit at the top and all the way through. Fight insects on fruit trees and vines as long as they appear. For mildew on grapevines apply sulphur freely with a bellows; and hunt for and pick off caterpillars. Fruit trees may be budded this month and as long in September as the bark on the stock will slip freely and suitable buds can be obtained. strawberry beds (and in fact the whole fruit garden) clear of weeds, make new plantations on dark, cool days, and particularly before and after showers. The old canes of raspberries and blackberries should be cut away as soon as the ruit is gathered. Other Timely Matters.

Dispose of inferior animals, or such as cannot be kept profitably, during late summer or early autumn. Many a farmer makes a mistake by wintering animals that it would be greatly to his advantage to sell at once, or fatten and send to the butcher. Cows that are getting a little old, or are not good milkers, steers that are not promising and sheep that are not so good as the others of the flock, will not more now than at any future time. The fall pasture has put them in good condition and the pasture will not fail, causing the animals to lose a little, unless they have extra feed, beyond what their value will warrant. It will not pay to winter such stock. Better sell them at once, before flies get worse and pastures become scant, and invest the proceeds in first class animals. Keeping bee colonies strong is an important matter with all those who would succeed in apiculture And in order to become strong they must not be discouraged by being kept in too small quarters, and should not have too small an amount of honey left to them, so that they will imbibe a feeling of future starvation, kill off the drones and stop making brood comb; or if early in the season and crowded, that they will be constantly thinking of swarming Look to the health and comfort of the bees rather than after honey. Give them plenty of room; let them accumulate instead of divide, and become strong for defence against robbers, and able clustering to produce warmth enough for all purposes.

Worn out grass fields, or those infested with worms, should be turned over this month, and either reseeded or left for the seed to decay, to be in good condition for planting next spring. If reseeded, they should have a dressing of fine manure or of good fertilizer well harrowed in, that the grass seed may get a good start. If intended for cultivation next year it will be but little extra labor to sow upon it now either rye, at the rate of one bushel per acre, or barley and oats mixed, from two to three bushels per acre, which will prove valuable late in the fall to cut and feed are exhausted or the grass destroyed by the frost.

ELECTRICAL NOTES. An engineer has recently devised a new electrical machine by which weeds and ob-noxious grasses can be destroyed.

A telegraph cable between California and the Hawaiian Islands is one of the probabili-ties of the near future. The government survey, just finished, shows that such a scheme is very practical, and that a cable line could, with comparative case, be laid the necessary 6,000 miles. During the recent jubileee at Buda-Pesth commemorating the twenty-fifth anniversary of the crowning of King Franz Josef I. some very fine electric illuminations were made among which was a bank of incandescent lamps representing the monarch's initials arranged on a scaffold 100 feet wide and 65 feet high, which was in turn mounted on top of a high building. The design was visible for two and one-half miles. A modern invention, intended to do away with the necessity of ironing hats, consists of a high-speed electric motor and attachment, which revolves a hat at the rate of 2,000 turns a minutes and admits of a high polish being given it from the heat of friction developed, by holding a strip of silk against the surface. The Electrical Subway Commission of New Jersey has adopted resolutions requesting all companies desiring to erect wires over the streets of cities in that state to make application to them for permission. They have also decided to have all telephone, telegraph and cable wires in Jersey City and Newark placed underground, and are to give a public learing on the subject in Trenton on Sep

The tendency to use the electric light for advertising purposes has been stendily growing, and no more striking example of its effectiveness has been seen than the huge "Corbin" sign, 68x60 feet, which at Twenty-third street and Broadway, New York, yaunts the attractions of the Long Island scaboard for residential purposes in letters outlined by lamps of many colors. The latest idea in this direction in England is an electric cart, which during the day carries flaming placards through the streets, while at night its advertisements take the form of colored lamps.

Tabulated returns compiled by Electricity show the amazing growth and financial re-turns of the two leading electrical companies of the country. In 1883 the pusiness of the of the country. In 1883 the business of the Edison company amounted to $502,724.31. In 1891 it reached the grand argregate of $10;.833,481.44. The Thomson-Houston company shows receipts of $428,987.97 in 1883 and $10,304,580.17 in 1891. The profits of the business is indicated by the statement that the latter company in 1891 paid 7 per cent on $4,000,000 of preferred stock and 16 per cent on $6,000,000 of common stock, water and all. Even with these enormous profits, the company annually increased its surplus fund, which amounted to $7,546,-947.96 on the 1st of last February. The Edison company was capitalized; at $250,000 at its organization. Its capital now amounts to $10,000,000. For the past two years it paid 8 per cent annually. This company controls 373 central stations, has sold over 10,000,000 incandescent tamps and employs in four factories 4,576 men. The Thomson-Houston employs at its main factory in Lyna, Mass., 3,492 men, with a weekly payroll aggregating $38,000. The company controls $73 central stations, supplying 100,283 are lamps and 806 500 incandescen a lmps. Edison company amounted to $502,734.81.
