AUTUMNAL FRESHNESS IN THE ATMOSPHER

What the "Stay at Homes" Did to Amuse Themselves and Their Friends During the Past Six Days-Movements and Whereabouts.

The outing season is rapidly drawing to a close and the great mass of travelers are already on the way homeward. Plans are rapidly maturing and by another week Omaha will again be a society town. Already there is a tinge of autumn in the air, and the storm of the last day or two has reminded thousands that it is nearly time to go back to the comforts and old-fashioned rou tine of home life, which may not be so gay and exciting as a summer in the mountains or by the seashore, but after all are, in the long run, the most satisfying and decidedly

An Omaha Girl's Honors.

Miss Ruth Kimball, who may with entire propriety be claimed by Omaha, having acquired in the High school of this city the foundation for her subsequent career, as the Washington correspondent of the St. Paul Globe, has attained the heights and is now Globe, has attained the heights and is now one of the recognized newspaper women of the country. New York Truth, in speaking of Miss Kimball, says: "Women have followed man into nearly all pursuits. They have gone upon the battle-field and penetrated the binek forest of Af-rica, of whose horrors Stanley has so graphic-ally told. But before Miss Kimball, none had outpard the comparated the solutor of the entered the correspondents' gallery of the national capitol. Naturally there was a great curiosity to see this avant courier of her sex. and speculation was rife. Was she like the typical champion of woman's righ s! 15 was feared so, and so as they thought of such a possibility the thinkers grouned. And the more they thought the more convinced they became that it could be no other. But when on one afternoon of last winter there came into the sacred precincts of the gallery a young woman scarce past the borderiand of girlhood, tall, graceful to a degree, with a clear, frank face and a refinement of mannet that stamped her well bred, and whose en-Ruth graved card bore the inscription: Kimball, St. Paul Globe, there was a sud-den destruction of preconceived ideas and general gratification sprang up in their stead. "Speculation then turned to the quality of her work and the investigation was equally surprising. There was some little trouble over her formal admission to the gallery, owing to the want of a precedent, but that was passed and thereafter all was well. There were many special articles written about her of a very complimentary charac-ter. They would have turned the head of many, but it dian't disturb the equilibrium of her head a hair's breadth. She was successful, but that did not surprise her. She had felt she would be, and her former successes on the local staff of the Globe, and prior work on other newspapers, had given her reason for confidence. She rapidly acquired a valuable acquaintance and her telegraphic news as well as her letter corres pondence was accurate, fresh and exceed-ingly well prepared. "She wields a graceful pen and the critical editors of many publications willingly testify to the cleverness of her verses, many of which they have published. Before coming to Washington she did regular reportor-fal work and dramatic criticism for the Globe. In the discharge of her duties she has brushed a great deal with the world, but through it all she has preserved intact the intrinsic charm of true womanhood, and therein proved false the belief of many that to enter the vocations thus far occupied by man almost alone necessitates divorce from all, or at least from something that is good and beautiful in her sex."

A Platform Pa-'y.

Socially the event among the younger society people was the platform party given by Miss Hatte Cady in honor of Miss Palmer, who is the guest of Miss Sue Col-petzer, Thursday evening. A pavilion had been erected for the occasion on the east of the residen above ground, residence, somewhat ground, the floor of side somewhat raised which was canvassed for d Myriads of Japanese lanterns for dancing. were hung about the improvised ball room which with the headlights gave an artistic air to the pretty scene. The night was perfect, a real fall evening, it being just cool enough for dancing, and the young people, who have dominated society in the absence of their elders, greatly enjoyed the opportunity to dance. The house was thrown open during the received by Miss Cady, Miss Pal-mer and Mrs. Cady, Miss Cady looked particularly sweet is a gown of white sik trimmed with ribbon. A Voice From the Pacific.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 30.-[Special correspondence of THE BEE.]-I am not a deserter from my old home in Omaha, and although I have been traveling up and down the Pacific coast both by land and water for the past five months I have not as yet cultivated one of those deep clinging affections for California that would make me contented to live and die here.

From Seattle in the state of Washington down to that southern California town, San Diego, I have not felt better satisfied with any place than San Francisco. There is not a doubt but what "'Frisco" is the spot on this coast, and I must say that for a general good time all around this city leads in everything. But with all the sight seeing and grand rushing around all day and a good part of the night, an Omaha face will cause a great tumult of joy in my heart and no sight is so we come as a familiar home face, 1 always read over the list of hotel arrivals the first thing in the morning, while waiting between courses at breakfast. I might say here, by way of parenthesis, that one has to wait just as long as we do in a certain first class res-taurant in Omaha before one gets an entre meal. I heard the other day of a man died from starvation during a long wait, and he was so emaciated-poor man-that the combined weight of clothes and man did not exceed thirty pounds. You can fully under-stand the awfulness of that statement when i tell you he brought down the scales to 185 pounds when he entered that restaurant. The other morning 1 picked up a Chronicle and saw the name of one of our Omaha rail.

road officials registered at the Palace hotel, also the names of his wife and daughter, who is one of Omaha's most brilliant society girls. To tell you the truth, and just betwee ourselves, I was very much surprised to see "Mrs. — " and "Miss — " in town same time as "Pa." For I must tell you that these dear gental old fathors and husbands, who are the very personification of propriety at home, seem to be possessed by some little imp, in this bracing air det here, that makes them do many menuliar there.

imp, in this bracing air out here, that makes them do many peculiar things. I might tell many funny tales, but it would be dreadfully mean and besides I don't want to be cut right and left when I return home. However, one can't holps feeling rathe startled to walk into a theater some evening and see Mr. So and So from Omaha seated in a private box, with one of 'Frisco's fair beauthes enjoying the play, and then, after the show, to happen in a restairant and brush past a haif open door, just opened enough for one to see "same man and same girl" with a bothe of Pommery calmiy sitting on the table, at the property of the same restard of the table. or at either place, oysters raw, resting or their half shell; in fact, everything looking so cozy and the little suppor gotten up in the most recherche mauner. Such things are not quite right, are they ! There is an Omaha doptor here, with a name one could puil teeth with, and a Boston 19225 man who have been distinguishing them-selves in more ways than one. Comparing the present time with the year of the last presidential election polities seems guite dead in this section of the country. I am quite disgusted, for t had anticipated I am quite disgusted, for I had anthripatod some rare fun in listening to some furious oid political speeches from various clever California orators. The theaters here have had nothing lately in the way of good shows that would set the town on fire. At present we are all on the qui vive for Lillian Russell, who is to arrive next week. I shall propably join the crowd that will rush to welcome the fair Lillian in "La Cigaie," even if I have to pawn my old clothes to buy a railcoad ticket home. ΞН.

The aftermath of the meeting is apparent and while it cost nearly meeting is apparent and while it cost nearly $10,000 to properly entertain the visiting Shriners and their wives, there is quite enough in sight to pay all bilts and probably leave a little balance in Tangier's treasury. And this is due to the business men who were associated with Potentate Akin. While praise is due every individual memory of the praise is due every individual member of the various committees, particular commendation is due John T. Clarke, T. K.
