HUSTLING TO GET READY TALL

Many of the Early Arrivals Were Tempo rarily Inconvenienced, But Everything is in Shape for the Opening Today -Some Notable Visitors.

"Dogs, dogs, dogs, everywhere. Will they never stop coming I' exclaimed Secretary Marston of the Omana Kennel club, as he stood on the steps of the Exposition building late yesterday afternoon and watched the unloading of the twenty-seventh dray lond of crates and cages containing from two to six animals each. They came from everywhere, from the far northeast and from the shores of the Guif of Mexico. It seemed as if everybody who had a blooded pedizree. dog had sent it to the show.

The inside of the nail was a sight, dog cages and crates everywhere and every one of the canines was howling as if it had nothing else to do. But talk about hustling! The Kennel club employes and even the managers, Waterman, Marston, Jack Evans, Nasen and a lot of the others, were rushing around, stumbling over lov dogs, kicking at suvage buil terriers and giving the big Bernards and Danes a wide berth as they chased themselves from one part of the room to another.

The carpenters were late, the draymen also, and the quartete would frequently meet in a convenient corner and the next thing to be seen would be a faint cloud of blue haze hovering over the outfit. Finally the carpenters and joiners and nations showed up and the placing of the benches begau. Owing to the large number of entries it required many more stalls than the management had originally figured on. But this didn't put them out much as new men were put to work building the portable partitions nd flooring

Before the sun had set about sixty stalls had been put in place and then more men were obtained, so the work of arranging for the visiting dogs wents merriny and rapidly Every ane connected with the club on. Every one connected with the club, from its dignified president down to the newest member, labored with hammer and nails along with the carpenters. As fast as the stalls were ould straw was spread over the bottom and the dogs in the crates were released, waiked a few times around the room or across the platform which will serve as the judges' ring and then to their stalls where they were securely chained.

All the Doggies Were Hungry.

At 7 o'clock the chief of the culinary department appeared, attended by a dozen or more men and the work of feeding and wa tering the animals commenced. All kinds of food was served. The tiny toy had marshmallows and cream for supper, while his maintows that cream for supper, while his neighbor, the big Dane, with the deep volce, had a chunk of raw or cooked beef as big as a muo's head. It was a great sight to see the animals eat. Dogs that had trav-cied a thousand or more miles shut up in stat crates were ravenous. Everything in sight was disposed of with astonishing rapidity. Onestranger in the hall remurked, as he saw Champion Victor Joseph swallow a two-pound beefsteak at a single mouthful, that his owner ought to go into partnership with a butcher

The arrivals cominued all the evening and night and by noon today every dog entered will be in his stall ready to be gazed at by the curious throng. Several of the trains bearing valuable dogs were delayed, but the railway people assured the Kennel club men that they would arrange to push the doge through before the opening of the big show. A freight wrock on the southern division of the B. & M. delayed the twenty four animals from Shallenberger's Alma, Neb., gennels These dogs were due to arrive at 6:30 p. m. but aid not get in until after midnight.

Some Famous Visitors.

Ben F. Lewis of Philadelphia arrived over the Northwestern at 10 o'clock with forty dogs confined in twenty crates which occu pied one-half of a large baggage car. This collection includes dogs of every description, but mostly field animals, Dr. Crver of Philadelphia sent by Mr. Lewis his $5,000 pug dog, Bob Ivy, and little Bob was the envy of the rest of the kennel. for he had a nice large padaed basket to travel in while the other animals were confined in ordinary crates. NEWS FROM COUNCIL BLUFFS Captain John Bates of Engine Company No. 1 Meets with a Bad Accident. HIS MIRACULOUS ESCAPE FROM DEATH

He Plunges Headlong from the Second Story of the Building to the Floor Below-He is Probably Fataily Injured.

Captain John Bates, one of the firemen at engine house No. 1, on lower Main street, met with a serious, and what will, in all probability, prove to be a fatal accident yesterday afternoon. He was going to slide down from the second story through the "pole hole," when in soms way he missed his footing and plunged headlong to the floor beneath, a distance of at least fifteen feet. A pipe, which he was smoking, fell to the floor just before he started, and its striking on the floor called the attention of one of the other firemen, who looked around just in time to see Bates fall. A rope was stretched across the front end of the engine room, with one end fastened to the wall by a stout iron ring. This rope ran directly underneath the "pole hole," and Bates struck, head downwards, with his shoulders on the rope with such force that the ring was broken squarely in two. The rope served to break the force of his fail somewhat, but he landed with his head on the floor so hard that he was rendered uncon-scious. It was nearly half an hour before he regained consciousness. Physicians were summoned, and they all agreed that it was very doubtful whether he would ever recover. The indications were that he had sustained a fracture of the skull. If it had not been for the rope, which broke the force of the fail, he would, without a doubt, have been stilled instantly. What caused him to fall is not known positively, as he has not been rational enough to give any explanation Last evening the injured man was resting easily, as he was kept under the influence of opiates for a good share of the time. During opiates for a good share or the that was asked one of his conscious moments he was asked for an explanation of the accident, and rewill probably be moved to one of the hos-pitals today, in order that he may receive nore skillful attention than can be given him at the engine house, where he is staying.

Our late loss by five was covered by two policies, both in the COUNCIL BLUFFS INSURANCE COMPANY. By 7 o'clock the text morning after the fire the secretary was on the ash heap, pencil in hand, ready to figure the loss down to bedrons, which he did, too, saying that' it was his duty and no small part of his business " So long as he did not go below bedrock we had no reason to complain, consequently the settlement was not only prompt, but in every way satisfactory, so much so that in addition to $9,200.00 (seven policies) carried by this company before the fire we now add to it $16,000.00. Being intimately acquainted with the ccretary and directors we cannot be persuaded that better indemnity can be obtained than that offered by our home company, besides we believe in patronzing worthy home enterprises, everything being equal, and unless we do we shall continue to be dependent on foreign capital and corporations.

It is at Norfolk being mounted and will be placed on exhibition as soon as it arrives. After being exhibited for several days it will be made into a barbecue and given to the worthy poor of the city. AMUSEMENTS. "Camille" is chief among the crotic French school of plays whose moral (or immoral ate mosphere is thought by some to be a strain on the ethics of Anglo-Saxon purity, but Dumas has woven into its fiber such drammatic power and human luterest as to mak it one of the famous and standard dramas and many celebrated actresses have leat it the luster of their genius in its interpretation. The play is a delineation of character and a dissection of emotion rather than a story, and it is only tolerable when interpreted by artists. In reviewing the work of Miss Clara Mcr-

ris who presented "Camille" at the Boyd last evening, one must be hampered by doubt as to her physical condition by the question as to what failings, if there be any, must be attributed to ill health. It can be said however without injustice that Miss Morris no longer looks the character. Time has left its teli-tale marks upon the features, and clever as this artiste is, she cannot ade-quately convey the illusion of youth, beauty and buoyancy. In the earlier scenes of the play Camillo bandles wittleisms and p presumed to have gay, untroubled moods, but Miss Morris' voice as well as her manner was weighted with weariness, whether from illness or mere fuebleness must be conject-ured, and her work, frankly, was disappointing. In the strongly emotional passages, however, she displayed the consummate art her audience had the right to expect. She offered little of the stress of stormy passion with which more robust actresses have portrayed Camilie, but there was quite as much effect in her repressed intensity. The retching of the consumptive cough was simulated to the life, and, indeed the suspicion that it may not have been a lacting made it even painful. Miss Morris was particularly powerful in tearful pass-ages, and the lachrymose snuffling was a triumph of mimetic art.

Of the company little need be said. Mr. J. M. Colville, who essaved Armand, has a re-sound voice and a good stage presence, but his acting was colorless, scarcely a note of fire or passionate feeling in his tones. Mrs. Fred Hooker made a rather noisy clown of Madame Prudence, and several others stum-bled most lamentably in their lines. The supporting company left no impression that is remarkably distinctive or agreeable or excellent.

campaign against a certain party, whose name is not given out, who claims to have a first mortgage on the souls and bodies of some of the jurymen before whom the case of Dr. C. O. Hood against the Northwestern Railway company is being tried. Who the favored individual is his honor does not say. but he gave the members of the jury a fair chance to tell if they knew, and the result may be a hornet's nest about somebody's ears.

It was just after the opening of court when he addressed the jurymen in the box before him. "It has been brought to my notice," he said, "that a certain man has been boast ing publicly that he controls four of the me who are sitting in this jury box. The man refer to is not an attorney for either of the parties to the present suit, and so far as I know he has no direct interest in the matter at issue, but I want to call your attention to the matter in order to preveat him from hav ing any undue influence over you. It is your duty, according to the oath you took before the commencement of the trial, to court if anyone comes to you with any proposition or tries to bribe you or in any way influence your vote."

After this address, which caused quite a stir among the jurymen, the trial, which has already occupied almost a week of court, proceeded. Judge Smith stated that he doubted whether the trial could be legally extended into the next term, which will oper a week from next Monday, and he accord ingly fixed the hours of convening court from now on at 9:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. in order to finish it up if possible by the end of this term. Both sides concede that the trial now in progress will take up the rest of this week, and there are several other suits still to be tried when this is finished.
