GRAND ARMY DEPARTMENT

Address of the Union Veteran League of Iowa to Their Comrades.

FACTS FOR SOLDIERS TO CONSIDER

Stirring Appeal for Vigorous Work Against the Enemies of Loyalty-Recollections of a Soldier Who Witnessed the Bombardment of Sumter.

The Iowa division of the Union Veteran League of America has issued a circular to members of the order giving convincing reasons why they should work and vote for Benjamin Harrison. Extracts from the addresses of General Daniel E. Sickles, the onelegged hero of Gettysburg, are given, in one of which he said: "I do not feel like supporting any man who has treated the old soldiers the way Mr. Cleveland has treated them. By his insults he sent General McClellan with a broken hear' to the grave. I feel as the old soldier does. I tell you, sir, the old soldier will not vote for Cleveland. He cannot carry New York." These are supplemented with extracts from southern newspapers denouncing union soldiers and calling pensioners "beggars," "looters" and "pillagers. The circular quotes President Harrison's splendid tribute to the veterans in his letter of acceptance, and concludes as follows:

"Every member of the Union Veteran League of Iowa feels the necessity of urging every comrade of the great army who fought to save the union to do his duty this fail as he did it in 1861-65, by voting for that gallant soldier and statesman, Benjamin Harrison.

'Let others carp, if they wish, about expensive pension legislation; we, the soldiers, not only believe, but know whatever this great government may give the survivors of the war will be but a small recompense for the noble service they rendered their country, the sufferings they endured, and the multitude of perils they encountered.

Every soldier who wore the blue and did his duty permitted those who stayed at home to reap the rich harvest of wealth or to finish their education and prepare themselves for the struggle of life; and therefore he has the right to feel that his country should at least be just to him, not by way of charity but justice, and this can only be done by fair pension laws, favored by President Harrison and opposed by Grover Cleveland and his rebel supporters." Saw Fort Sumter Bombarded. Charles P. Daley, sergeant United States army, retired, writes to the Washington Star the following interesting account of what he saw of the bombardment of Fort Sumter: When South Carolina had sounded the tocsin of secession I was in Boston, and although a mere boy I was brimful of fight. I wanted to go out right away and do up the whole of South Carolina in less than no time. I started for the recruiting office right away, carrying with me a written permit from a bogus guardian. I was enlisted at once and packed off to Governor's Island, N. Y., in company with nine or ten other recruits. The steamship Star of the West was getting ready to take out reinforcements to Major Anderson at Fort Sumter, he having evacuated Fort Moultrie for the better security of his garrison at Sumter. Anderson requested General Scott and the rest of the authoritiesat Washington to send him reinforcements, as he was menaced on every side; but to all his pleadings he got a deaf car until secession had stepped in and taken root in Fort Moultrie. It was not until then that Scott ordered out the Star of the West with a few men, not one of whom they ever landed, for the rebs fired a gun or two from the vicinity of Fort Moultrie at the ship; the captain got knock-kneed through fear, put his ship about and returned to New York The Baltic was got in readiness imme diately, and about six months' provi sions put on board, and a battalion of about 275 men, picked or selected from about 600 recruits then on Governor's Island. First the old soldiers who had seen service before were chosen, and next the most expert of the young cruits, of which I had the honor to be a fair specimen, being an expert with the musket. We got on board about thirty small boats, with muffled oars, so we could steal into the garrison at Sumter. We had our oarsmen and marksmen all selected before we left New York. But while these preparations were going on some traitors in our vicinity gave the whole thing away by telegraph to Charleston, so when we got there everything was in readiness to give us a warm reception should we attempt to land at Sumter. Every sailboat in Charleston brought into commission and armed with brass howitzers. We could see them running back and forth be-tween our ship and the fort. We were met at Charleston bar by three men-ofwar, viz., the Pawnee, the cutter Harriet Lane and another whose name I cannot now remember. We got there just in time to witness the bombardment, We got to the bar about midnight. The sea was awful rough just then or we should have attempted to land by our small boats. As it was, we lowered two, but each was swamped as soon as it touched the breakers, so we had to give up the idea of running in just then. At about 4:15 a. m. the first gun was fired from Moultrie. The shot fell short about twenty-five or thirty yards from Sumter, and immediately after all the batteries around opened fire simultaneously. Their firing was wild at first, but after a while they got the range pretty accurately, so that I could count as many as twenty shells in quick succession bursting close, right over Sumter. This was continued for nearly hours, and we began to think that Anderson and his men had left the fort sometime during the night and that the rebels were firing at an empty fort, as we saw no shot fired from it during all this time of nearly two hours' bombardment. At about 6 a.m., as I was straining my eyes to see what the matter was with the little garrison, I saw the old stars and stripes hoisted or run up, and a few minutes after we saw a smoke and a flash from two gues in quick succession. then another and another, at intervals of about two minutes, all from the lower tier of guns. The fourth or fifth shot dismounted one of the Fort Moultrie guns. We could see a greet deal of confusion among the rebs. It must have been a solid shot, as it did not explode. A little while after some woodwork in Sumter caught fire and made a big blaze, and shortly after the upper or top of the flagstaff was shot down, carrying the flag with it. It was soon hoisted again. The firing from Sumter became slower and slower, until there was an interval of about fifteen minutes between shots, which led us to imagine that there weren't enough left to man two guns, and the little garrison must be nearly wiped out. After a while we saw a small boat skimming ncross from Fort Moultrie, and as it neared Sumter a white flag was raised on it. The firing censed and we concluded Anderson had surrendered, but we were mistaken for the toat went back and firing was resumed. It was not until some time after that another boat crossed and Anderson surrendered conditionally, He and his command were brought to our ship by a little steamer called the Isabelle. They brought all their small arms, ammunition and small military stores. They didn't have oven a hardtack to subsist on when they came to our ship. They were as hungry as wolves. Captain Chester, now of Third artiflery, was a sergeant at the time. I helped him up the gangway. The little steamer that brought alongside was so low that they had to do some climbing to get aboard of our ship. I will state a little incident that courred which came very near sending gave one rip to the halyard and brought down the old flag splashing in the tide. I raised my musicet (which was loaded) to my shoulder, but just as I was drawing a sure sight on that hayseed reb an officer who was standing behind me grasped the musket from me. I told the officer it was a shame to see the old flag insulted in that manner. While he bombardment was going on the gunboats blazed away at the sand batteries along the shore on Sullivan's island and silenced some of the guns there. When Major Auderson and his command came on board a salute was fired by the gun-boats and we started for New York with that little garrison of seventy-two men, carrying with us also part of the Sumter flagstaff with the post flag nailed to it. When we got in front of the battery at New York there was one reb to his kingdom come. When he stars and stripes, which were floating at the foremast of the little steamer, was grossly insulted by an ugly-looking clod-hopper who whipped out his jackknife.

the last of Anderson's men came aboard great excitement. The people on the battery could be counted by thousands. The crowd was so densely packed there and so excited that Major Anderson could not land there then. How he landed after I do not know, as we, the reinforcement, were landed at Fort Wood, Bedlee's Island, where now stands the statue of Liberty, and in a day or two after some of us were transferred to Fort Hamilton, where we were assigned to the Third United States in-

A Notable Nebraska Union. The campfire at John J. Halloran's farm residence last Thursday night was one of the greatest successes in a social way ever held in Holt county, says the O'Neill Frontier. It was a neighborhood reunion of the veterans of the war and their friends, and was most liberally attended, there being at least 400 people present.

Mr. and Mrs. Halloran and their daughters Mary and Delia, assisted by some of their neighbors, had made ample preparations for the entertainment of their guests, and they acquitted themselves so creditably that the affair will long be remembered by every man, woman and child present as one of the pleasant affairs of life. There was plenty to eat and drink for all comers. and no bashfulness was felt in taking "right hold."

A large pavilion had been creeted on the west side of the house and here the supper was served and the speaking took place. A nice little program had been prepared and was carried out creditably. Colonel A. L. Towle acting as chief fugleman.

Rev. DeLamater invoked divine blessing in a very becoming manner. W. D. Mathews, in behalf of Mr. Halloran, welcomed the people to the festivities, and turned over the house and farm to their use.

Colonel Towle in his usual happy manner responded, and when he had finished all were good natured. Colonel Strong of Omaha, commander of Halloran's regiment, was present by special invitation, and being called on made some remarks to the boys which were apparently applicable. The colonel said it was his maiden speech, but he talked like a veteran. His references to John Kent, Jim Whitehead, Pat Gahagan and Jack Halloran, his boys who were present, were of interest to all. Johnny Kent was a drummer boy, son of n widow, who entered at 12 years of age. He was at 14 years of age mustered out account of illness, a skeleton weighing only sixty-five pounds, and sent home to his mother to die. But he didn't die, and came up from Omaha with the colonel to see his old friends and comrades, Jack and Pat and Jim, and was over six feet high and weighed 200 pounds. Of Jim Whitehead the colonel said no braver man ever shouldere! a musket, and as an illustration told this: Upon one occasion it was necessary to have lifteen men for work that meant almost certain death-it was ninety-nine chances in 100-and volunteers were called for. The first man to step out of the ranks was Whitenead. Colonel Strong and Jack Haloran and Pat Gahagan were the bravest of brave Irish boys, exemplary soldiers and he was mighty glad to see them once more.

James Whitehead followed with a few remarks to his commander's that were very applicable. He admitted the bravery of the old soldiers as referred to by the other speakers, but was of the opinion that the boys of today if called on would prove as brave as did the boys

Speaking for the Sons of Veterans Charlie Towle covered himself with glory and secured many compliments. Doc Mathews also made brief remarks on this subject.

Prof. E. W. Hunt was then called to the front. The speaker said he felt rather out of place before such a gathering, as he was neither a veteran nor the son of a veteran. But the professor is equal to any occasion, and he explained how his father, from disability, was unable to de duty, but aided in raising a company, and that he as a kid had carried grub to the darkies in the hay loft in the barn while they were on their way north.

The exercises were interspersed with vocal and instrumental music. The song, "We Have Drunk from the Same Canteen," was exceptionally fine and well rendered.

Voluntary remarks by comrades were called for and Flemming, Skelton, Gahagan, Slattery, Kent, Gould, Waller, Pond and others responded, and for a time it seemed like an old-fashioned Methodist experience meeting. Gahagan declared that Coionel Strong saved his life. They were in Libby prison together. Pat was confined in a room over where the colonel was confined. Pat was out of tobacco and money, and affirms he was dying for some of the former article. By means of a note and a string he acquainted his colonel with his condition, who responded by giving

Pat all the money he had. Many anecdotes were told of more or less interest. The affair did not come to a windup until near midnight, when the good nights and goodbyes were said, all expressing themselves as having had a splendid time.

THE SPECULATIVE MARKETS

Wheat Rallies at Last After Touching the Lowest Point

HEAVY EXPORTS WARNED THE SHORTS

There Was Especial Weakness Early in December Wheat, Which Was Sold Heavity by Armour and Others

-Stocks and Bonds.

Cotcago, Itl., Oct. 20.-Wheat railled at last today, after having touched the lowest point reached in five years. Heavy exports acting as a warning signal to shorts produced the up-ward change. On the final break the price went the under to 72e a bushel for December delivery, a drop of 15c in an hour. Compared with yesterday's closing figures wheat tonight shows from he to he gain, while corn is off from he to he. Provisions generally exhibit a substantial advance, particularly October ribs.

Wheat for a time seemed utterly demoralized, cables were generally lower, the receipts were heavy everywhere and holders were discouraged and general liquidation was the rule. Numerous stop-loss orders became ouerative and country selling orders were

There was especial weakness in December wheat, which was sold heavily by Armoue, Counselman & Day, Elwards and Gibbs Pardridge sold May vigorously, and the crowd was generally on the selling side. During the first hour the market made the lowest record of the crop, but on the break the demand began to improve, and Lozan, Bailey, Milmine Bodman and others were liberal buyers, and the early short seliers began to take back what they had sold.

About the same time too, the news began to take on a more encourtizing aspect. New York reported that 90,000 bu, had been taken there for export; 50,000 of Kansas wheat was said to have been sold at Kansas City for export, by the way of New Orie in and 1,500,000 bu, more was said to be under control, and would go out as soon as the inspection could be secured. Bradstreet also reported the exports from the coasts for the week at 4,708,000 bu, against 3,000,000 bu, for the week previous. All this soon changed the sentiment. There was a decided rally and the market he'd quite steady at the advance, though it was sild the business at Kansas City was old business. The estimate on the visible supply increase for Monday was reduced to about 2,3 0,300 bu. The opening was from $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ lower than yesterday's closing, ruled weak and prices further declined $\frac{1}{2}$ corso, followed by an advance of $\frac{1}{2}$ for May and 1\frac{1}{2}$ for December, fluctuated some, and closing was from $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ for May and 1\frac{1}{2}$ for December, fluctuated some, and closing was from $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ for May and 1\frac{1}{2}$ for December, fluctuated some, and closing was from $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ for May and 1\frac{1}{2}$ for December, fluctuated take on a more encouraging aspect. The corn market started out for a smash in prices this morning. The heavy movement, the bright and cooler weather, the punicky condition of wheat, the first hour contributed to the weakness. The receivers and shippers and things generally proceeded to dump corn in the pit. The selling was led by Patton, Bartlett-Frazier and Andrews of the clique. The break was stopped by timely buyin; by a few parties. Not only was the decline checked, but Clamplin, Boyden & Co. for Cudahy and Wright continued buying until the market was rushed up to the best figures of the day. At the opening initial trades were at from lac to be decline and on sales sold off lige and reacted again.

Outs followed corn closely all day. There was moderate selling on the soft spots and buying on the late advance. The tuil clique in provisions again took hod of the market after letting it sag for several days and the result was a decided upturn in prices all around. D. The corn market started out for a smash after letting it sag for several days and the result was a decided upturn in prices all around. The advance in January book on the early trading was nearly 20%. Lard was bid up 15% for November and January. Bibs advanced less than the for Jonuary, but the fancy deal in October ribs was revived with considerable force. After midday all else was nexiceted and the whole body of traders massed around a few parties who were trying to effect trades in ribs for the month. Finally some one bought 50,000 at $11.30. This increased the interest and the close was at $1.75, a jump of 75% from last ni nt. Shippers were unable to force a reduction from the previous rate of 25% for wheat and 26 for corn to Buffalo.

Estimated receipts of logs for next week. 150,000 head. Receipts for corresponding week last year, 22.335 head.

The cattle market has been deadless. Increase over last year, 107,411 18,353 7,250
The cattle market has been decidedly active and healthy all week. While receipts for the week have shown an increase over the preceding week of 1921 with 500 head, none of the local houses have been able to secure as many beef cattle as they could have conveniently used. In 20,380 quence of this cattle have sold at better prices all week. The advance has been fally 250 on both beef steers and butchers' stock, and this advance has not been, as is generally the case, confined to the best grades. All grades both steers and cows, have shared in the general improvement and the market has been in a very satisfactory condition all week.

Nothing new his fieveloped in the stocker and feeder line. Business has been lively and all desirable offerings have met with a ready sale at good strong prices. Even the light, thin stock cattle and yearlings have more freely, although at the same low, mean prices.

Hogs-Values have fluctuated within a com

Hogs—Values have fluctuated within a comparatively narrow range, but with lar, ely increased receipts the trade rather weakened toward the close of the weak, and after advancing flee to be about Wednesday the close is at prices not a great deal different from the close of last week. Aside from an increase of over $(0) in receipts compared with last week and $0.00 compared with the last week and $0.00 compared with the last week and $0.00 compared with the last week of Octo er last year, conditions have shown little or no change. Packers and shippers continue free buyers, and the fresh meat demand holds out well and will probably improve right along now.

Liberal supplies and lower eastern markets gave us a doll trade with declining prices from start to finish. On the early market with good competion trade had some line to it and prices ruled about a nickel lower than Friday. As receipts increased and advect from Chicago became more bearish and as shipping had fresh meat buyers, having filled their urgent orders, dropped out, the market weakened and closed fully be lower than Friday and in some cases more. Common light and mixed to choice butcher and neavy loads sold at from $4.50 to $5.50 but the bulk of the fair to good hogs sold 5 to 10 lower than Friday on an average, or at from $4.40 to $5.45 last Saturday.

Sheep—Receipts have been very moderate against $5.5) to $5.55 Friday and $5.45 to $5.45 last Saturday.

SHEEP-Receipts have been very moderate and rather unevenly distributed throughout the week, but the market in general has been very inadequately supplied and prices have ruled rather firm. The offerings today were decidedly mixed and all common. Pretty good spring lambs brought $4.25 and fair ewes $4.50 and $8.60. Some very indifferent westerns uid not find a purchaser. Desirable muttons are in good demand and quotably strong. Fair to good natives, $5.50 a.64.25; common and stock slicep, $2.256.25; good to choice 40 to 9)-lb. lambs $4.00$4.75.
